JOE'S ALL RIGHT, SAYS GOV. FOSS

When Governor Foss was asked today what he thought of the bitter attack made on him in the Senate yesterday by Joseph F. Lomasney, brother of Martin Lomasney, he smiled and replied:

"Joe's all right."

The Governor was seated at his desk, with the headline of a recent editorial in the AMERICAN in his hand. The heading was:

"The man who happens to leave his footprints on the sands of time must have the end to begin with."

"What have you to say about the Senator's attack on you," the Governor was asked.

The Governor got up from his seat, shook hands with the reporter and patted him on the back. It was plain to see His Excellency was in an optimistic mood.

"Oh, this isn't the first time," he said in a half whisper. "I guess we can stand it, old boy. Joe's all right."

Just then Fred Macleod, formerly chairman of the Democratic State Committee, strolled in with two friends whom he introduced to the Governor.

The attack of Senator Lomasney was in connection with an attempt in the Senate to pass the teachers' salary bill over the Governor's veto, which lost by one vote. Lomasney said he proposed to "tear the mask of hypocrisy and chicanery" from the face of the Governor.

Notice that a motion to reconsider the vote in the Senate which was given yesterday for to-day, it is believed, will probably be postponed until next week. The motion for reconsideration will prevail because that will require only a majority vote. Then if the teachers can capture one more Senator they can pass their bill over the Governor's veto, as the House has done.

The Senate to-day, by agreement, postponed reconsideration of its vote on the teachers' salary increase bill till next Tuesday. By a vote of 23 to 14 yesterday afternoon the Senate refused to override the Governor's veto of the bill. If one vote switches, the bill will pass. The motion for reconsideration was made by Senator Hatton of Charlestown.

JOHN RENNISON FOR CHILDREN'S BOARD

John Rennison of No. 1 Adams street, Charlestown, was to-day appointed by Mayor Fitzgerald a trustee of the children's institution department. This makes the fifth appointee the Mayor has named for this place, Gaspare DiCola, Samuel H. Borofsky, Phillip Sondheim and Aaron Yaffee having been rejected by the Civil Service Commission. Rennison is a retired furniture dealer and is a "Deano."

LOWELL CHARTER BILL SUBSTITUTED

After a debate lasting half an hour, in which Senator Newhall of Lynn, chairman of the legislative Committee on Cities, had played a member of the present Lowell city government, whom he did not name, as being "not only a disgrace to the Lowell city government, but to the city of Lowell," the Senate this afternoon substituted the new Lowell city charter bill for an adverse report of the Committee on Cities by a voice vote.

POLICE FORCE IS OUT TO-DAY IN SUMMER GARB

For the next three or four months, beginning to-day, the Boston patrolmen will wear grey helmets instead of the heavy blue Winter helmets. Light weight blue blouses will also take the place of the long coats. Men stationed at the crossings will wear white gloves at all times while on duty. The men on Sunday duty will also be obliged to wear white gloves. These changes are made every Summer. To-day Superintendent Pierce telephoned to the sixteen different police stations and notified the captains that Summer was here to stay and that it was time to make the change to the Summer regalia.

MISS SEARS IN A POLO MATCH

WESTBURY, L. I., June 9.—In a polo game preliminary to the big international match on Meadowbrook field this afternoon, Miss Eleanora Sears, the Boston society girl athlete, took part during the last period of the game.

H. Phipps, playing on the team designated as the "Whites," dropped out and Miss Sears took his place. She gave an exhibition of daring riding and clever mallet work that made the British players gasp with wonder. She made several hard shots with comparative ease.

This is said to be the first time in America that a woman has played in a polo match with men.

BROKEN HYDRANT SOAKS PASSENGERS

Forty people on an outward-bound Cambridge car on Massachusetts avenue, Cambridge, were drenched to-day, when a lagging car skidded and snapped off a hydrant, releasing a stream of water that shot across the street about seven feet above the ground. The automobile was driven by H. A. Barter of No. 749 Boylston street. It skidded on the car tracks where a watering cart had left them wet, and shot across the road into the hydrant. The hydrant was snapped almost off. The water it released struck the car at shoulder height to the passengers. The car was crowded and not one escaped the shower. The car line was blocked for half an hour before the water could be turned off.

VERMONT GIRL DIES OF BULLET WOUNDS

BURLINGTON, Vt., June 9.—Miss Mae Labell, 18 years old, died to-day as the result of being shot twice by Arthur Dosworth on Wednesday last at Essex Junction, three miles from here. Just before she died she made a statement to the district attorney, who has refused to make public its contents. Dosworth met the girl on the street, and pulling a revolver from his pocket is alleged to have fired five times at the girl.

3-ALARM BLAZE IN WALTHAM

A three-alarm fire to-day destroyed the two-story wooden barn of the Waltham Coal Company and threatened the gas tanks of the Newton & Watertown Gaslight Company and the factory of the Waltham Watch Tool Company. The damage is estimated at $7,000.

By the time the firemen arrived the flames had eaten through the roof. The firemen devoted their energies to the surrounding buildings. Captain Louis Tracey sent in a third alarm, skipping the second, thus calling out every available piece of fire machinery and every fireman in Waltham.

The burning building sent a shower of sparks across the railroad tracks, which fell on the huge gas tanks, making a terrific explosion imminent. The heat was so intense there was great danger to the Watch Tool plant next door to the gas company.

Three firemen were thrown off a ladder by a strong stream of water. They were Captain Tracey, Arthur Floyd and Lieutenant Howard Walker, all of Hose No. 1. Walker's clothes were torn off his back by the force of the stream and he was so badly shaken up that he had to be attended by a physician.

An inbound local train caused a scare among the large crowd on the railroad, obliging the people to dash madly toward the Waltham side. The train slowed up somewhat as it passed the fire.

The fire was under control in about an hour. The damage to building and contents, which are mostly hay and grain, is estimated at $7,000. This is the fourth fire in the coal company's buildings in five years.

MURDER CHARGED IN AN INDICTMENT

NEW BEDFORD, June 9.—The Grand Jury has reported to the Superior Court a true bill against Edmund Berube, charged with the murder of Morris Schwartz of Fall River, Saturday night. The charge is that Berube went into Schwartz's pool room, and after watching the game for a time, reached over and cut Schwartz's throat with a handleless razor. Berube gave himself up and admits the crime. Forty other indictments were returned, including one for manslaughter against Edward H. Hancock and Charles H. Jay of Attleboro, who are charged with having killed George Hunt and Miss Lottie Thomas, while running an automobile from Pawtucket to Attleboro on April 19, last.

JURY EXCUSED ON TRIAL OF PLASS

Attorney Krum of St. Louis, of counsel for the Rev. Norman Plass, Charles H. Brooks and John L. Traphagen, on trial on a charge of using the mails in a scheme to defraud in connection with the Redwendale Investment Company, to-day addressed Judge Dodge in the United States District Court on a motion to dismiss the jury. He contended that the prosecution had not made out a sufficient case. The jury has been excused until Tuesday and Judge Dodge has taken the matter under advisement.

DEPOSITORS MOB FAILED LONDON BANK

LONDON, June 9.—Fearing violence from the hordes of clamorous depositors who surrounded the building, a heavy detail of policemen to-day was placed almost at Birkbeck banking institution which announced its failure yesterday by High Holborn. Many frantic depositors are women. Reassuring statements were given out, but in face of reports that the liabilities may go to $4,000,000, they did not allay fears.

ATWOOD FLIES TO HIS DINNER

Harry N. Atwood, the Lynn aviator, and Charles K. Hamilton, flew to-day from the Squantum aviation field to the Squantum Inn for dinner. They missed the hourly electric car and, rather than wait, made the flight. This is the first time anyone has flown to dinner in an aeroplane in New England. They used a Burgess-Wright machine and landed in the back yard of the hotel. Proprietor J. W. Moran and one of the waiters cranked the machine when the aviators were ready to return. To-day was ideal for flying, and the two made several flights, carrying as passengers at different times, Eugene Hugh and John Myers of Memphis and Physical Director Reynolds of the Palmhurst Agricultural School.

BOSTON & EASTERN BILL THROUGH HOUSE

By an overwhelming voice vote the House of Representatives to-day passed the Boston & Eastern electric railroad bill to be engrossed. An amendment offered by Representative Martin Quinn of Swampscott, providing for the fixing of a twelve cent maximum fare between Boston and Lynn, was defeated by a rising vote of 19 to 68. The bill now goes to the Senate.

Representatives Meaney of Blackstone, Cogswell of Lynn and Newton of Boston led the fight for the bill and against the amendment. The amendment was declared to be hostile to the bill and an attempt to bring about its defeat.

The bill passed to-day provides that the Railroad Commission shall grant a certificate of exigency to the Boston & Eastern Electric Railroad Company to enable the company to build a high-speed electric railroad northerly from Boston with terminals at Beverly and Danvers. The bill was bitterly fought by railroad interests at the committee hearings held on the bill.

BOSTON KEEPS THE GOLF CUP

BRAE-BURN GOLF CLUB, West Newton, June 9.—The custody of the Gribcom cup is left to the Bostonians, for they succeeded to capturing enough matches this morning at Brae-Burn against Phila delphia to leave the total necessary for a win.

The top of the Massachusetts list that appeared very strong succumbed to the Philadelphians, and Miss R. C. Harley and Mrs. G. W. Hoope, who were counted for a sure win, were beaten by Mrs. C. F. Fox and Miss McNeely by 1 up.

Mrs. A. P. Chase and Miss C. L. Dunican arrived at the last tee 1 down to Miss E. G. Hood and Mrs. O. McCammon, but won the last hole, so that an extra hole match was necessary. The latter pair won in the eighteenth hole. Mrs. H. H. Forbes, the new Eastern champion, and Mrs. E. H. Filler, who led the Philadelphia team, won their match on the last green from Miss M. S. ERUPTIONS OF COLIMA WIPE OUT VILLAGES

MEXICO CITY, June 9.—The greatest volcanic disaster that ever occurred in America has terrorized the greater part of Mexico. News of the eruptions of Mt. Colima and Mt. Bacalar, coming in to-day, confirms the estimate of more than 5,000 dead as the result of the seismic disturbance first manifested in the earthquake shocks that shook the capital.

The full force of the horror is just beginning to be realized as the reports come in from the stricken districts outside of Mexico City.

News was received to-day that Mount Bacalar, in the interior of Yucatan, had erupted, pouring forth great streams of molten lava. Many Indian villages were swept from the earth and all of their inhabitants killed. Those who tried to escape perished in a forest fire that caught from the volcano and burned unchecked over thousands of acres.

An estimate of the dead as the result of the earthquake of Wednesday and the attendant eruptions of the volcanoes was placed at 5,000 early to-day, but as further facts reach this city it is believed that the death list will amount to a greater figure.

When this city was shaken by last Wednesday's earthquake and the people ran in a frantic state through the streets, kneeling in the churches and praying for their safety, dispatches to the Hearst newspapers from here indicated that the disaster outside of the capital would probably prove more momentous than the people here realized.

Colima and Bacalar in Eruption

The new government which has undertaken to cope with the situation was appalled to-day as the news trickled in from every direction, much of it brought in by courier, telling the havoc wrought by the earthquake's shock and the molten lava that poured from at least two volcanoes that have suddenly become active.

The volcanoes that are belching forth great streams of blazing lava are the Mount Colima and the Mount Bacalar. For a distance of fifty miles or more the earth is strewn with the wreckage and dead bodies resulting from the eruption of Mount Colima.

It became known to-day that the activity of Mount Bacalar was almost as fatal as that of Mount Colima.

It was generally believed that Mount Bacalar was an extinct volcano, but the news reached here to-day that it had suddenly opened a great fissure from its side and spouted forth flames and ashes that fell with horrifying and deadly effect upon the numerous Indian villages for many miles around.

The eruption and earthquake were attended by a gigantic tidal wave on the shore of the Bay of Campeche which was terribly destructive of life and property.

President de la Barra and Francisco I. Madero are putting forth superhuman efforts to cope with the unprecedented disaster.

Trains carrying supplies and nurses to care for the wounded have been dispatched to the Mount Colima district. Agents of the Red Cross are on the scene and doing everything that human beings can to relieve the suffering.

The facts go to show that on the western coast of Mexico a tragedy has been enacted which is only second to that of historic Vesuvius.

The thousands of residents who live within the shadow of Mount Colima had been so believe that they were safe from the fire that slumbered beneath the crust of the mountain. There was but a faint rumbling to presage the awful visitation of Wednesday. This was not sufficient to warn the inhabitants of their danger. They were overtaken by the fiery rivers of lava as they ran in their terror for the volcano first poured out a blinding, suffocating cloud of ashes that fell upon the villages and smothered the vegetation of the fertile valley. Then came the leaping, hissing streams of lava that completed the work of destruction.

Of hundreds and hundreds of villagers who lived in the foot of the volcano's wrath, but few escaped to relate the tragic story of their peril.

Landslides Stop Railroads.

The natural agents of devastation are even continuing their work to-day.

Landslides cut off all railroad traffic between the city and Colima and Manzanillo. This will hamper the work of relief, but the Red Cross is active wherever it has ever been able to penetrate.

Its agents reported to-day more than 400 were killed in Zapotlan. Many are dying in the hospital. Of the dead, thirty-six bodies have been recovered and buried, only those on the surface are cared for. The ruins of their former homes will

SPANISH WAR WITH MOROCCO

MADRID, June 9.—Premier Canalejas informed the Chamber of Deputies that Spain's projected military operations at El Araish, Morocco, were not incompatible with the treaty of Algeciras or other agreements.

It was necessary, he said, for Spain to restore and preserve order in that part of Morocco.

It is understood that the government plans the occupation of Tetuan, Morocco, also, because Spanish subjects have been killed or maltreated by rebellious tribesmen.

In both the Tetuan and El-Araish regions Spanish interests are endangered. The French government is endeavoring to dissuade Spain from these military movements.

SHOW BILLS AT GRAFT TRIAL

SALEM, June 9.—Testimony to show that bills for city paving blocks were padded was introduced at the second day's hearing of the alleged Lawrence graft cases before Judge Bell and jury in the Essex Superior Criminal Court to-day.

Patrick J. Lawrence, superintendent of streets of Lawrence; Chief Clerk Michael J. Flynn of the street department, and Philip Holland, and Fred L. Snow of Wakefield, paving block contractors, are being tried on charges of conspiracy to defraud the city of Lawrence on sales of paving blocks to the city.

The prosecution is being handled by District Attorney Atwell. The first witness to-day was William A. Kelleher, city treasurer of Lawrence, who produced books and vouchers to show Fred L. Snow had received large payments from the city for paving blocks. Snow's December, 1910, check was $4,551.

Shipped 27 Carloads.

Bertie A. Pease of Nashua, N. H., who operates a granite quarry at Milford, N. H., testified that during last November and December he shipped seventy-seven carloads of paving blocks to Philip Holland at Lawrence.

Pease identified his way-bills, also the freight receipts at the Lawrence end. Then the bills paid by the Lawrence street department to Holland for blocks were presented.

The burden of this testimony was to show that the city paid Holland on twenty-seven carloads, supposed to contain over 80,000 blocks, when only 62,000 blocks had in fact been shipped by Pease.

Pease testified he shipped three carloads to Fred L. Snow, the other contractor-defendant. Similar variance between shipments and the amount paid for was found, according to Pease.

Vouchers Introduced.

Frank A. Mallorey, granite dealer of West Chelmsford, swore that on November 2, 1910, he shipped a car of blocks to Lawrence, consigned to Snow's order and containing 2,100 blocks. Bills and vouchers were then introduced to show that the city paid Snow for 2,900 blocks.

Fred J. Flynn of the State Police was next called.

District Attorney Atwell asked witness if Lawrence said anything about the crushed stone contract. James H. Vahey, counsel for Holland, objected on the ground that the crushed stone contract is not before the court now.

KAISER IS "FUSSY" ABOUT AMBASSADOR

WASHINGTON, June 9.—One reason for the delay in announcing the appointment of an ambassador to Germany to succeed Dr. Hill is that the German Emperor has suggested that he did not care to receive in Berlin the man whom President Taft had selected for that post. It will be recalled that some time ago the President made up his mind regarding this appointment and that the German government was asked whether the selection would be acceptable. His identity is not in the half a dozen names mentioned for the position, among them John A. Leishman, ambassador at Rome; William Woodville Rockhill, formerly minister to China, now envoy to Turkey; John Hays Hammond, Lloyd C. Griscom, Larz Anderson of Boston, a personal friend of the President; Ogden Mills, the financial banker, also a friend of Mr. Taft, Lloyd C. Griscom, once ambassador to Italy.

DISOBEYED ORDERS; POLICEMAN FINED

Patrolman James J. Mullen of the Jamaica Plain station pleaded guilty to the charge of disobedience of orders and was sentenced to perform fifty-six hours' punishment duty. Commissioner O'Meara in reviewing the evidence given at the hearing on the charges before the trial board, said: "On the actual facts of this particular offence, such a penalty is sufficient; but the commissioner finds in the record of the hearing, testimony which leads him to regard Patrolman Mullen that if he values the position which he has held for fourteen years and by means of which he supports a considerable family, he must change his manner of living in at least one important respect."

CLASH OVER HOTEL STRIKE

The flash of a stiletto in the hands of a strike-breaker put to work on the new Copley-Plaza hotel site in Copley square by the George R. Fuller Construction Company early to-day was the signal for a bowling chase by union men that terminated only with police interference and threatened for a time to assume the proportions of a riot.

A week ago the men employed on digging and construction struck for an increase of 5 cents an hour. The company refused to yield and the seventy-five to one hundred foreigners who walked out maintained a watch about the works daily.

Early to-day about forty strike-breakers arrived and were assigned to the digging. Some of them were union men and they quit immediately on being told the status of the case. Some of the others stayed, and there were angry words passed between the union forces and the men with the shovels.

Suddenly in one group of gesticulating laborers a knife gleamed and one of the strikers leaped back with a cry just in time to escape a wound.

There was a silence for a minute and then an angry roar and the man with the knife sped for his life across a temporary wooden bridge that runs over the excavations from Dartmouth street to Stanhope. At his heels there was a shouting band of angry foreigners, but he had a little lead and managed to dash into the engine room of Trinity court and slam the door in the face of his pursuers.

The engineers and several employes of the building held the door while Sergeant Berry and several patrolmen from Station 18, called by the telephone, hurried up. They succeeded in distracting the attention of the enraged strikers long enough to console the man with the knife to get away by a rear door.

GIRL'S LIFE SAVED BY TROLLEY FENDER

The life of Dorothy Gordon, a four-year-old child residing at No. 18 Waverley street, Malden, was saved, when the fender of an outbound Elevated car struck the child and tossed her aside. The accident occurred near the corner of Pleasant and Waverley streets, when the child attempted to cross the street with her small brother.

Next Sunday, June 11, the Contest Editor will publish the list of prize-winners in the special May offer, also the new list of candidates' standing, with vote totals. This will be the final list of candidates' standing before the contest ends. The great $35,000 Prize Contest will close next Thursday, June 15, at 7:00 p. m. No subscriptions will be accepted after that hour except those mailed up to then, as shown by the postmark.

Candidates are hereby notified that all coupon votes printed in the AMERICAN on and after Thursday, June 8, will be valueless after Thursday, June 22. This gives contestants one week only after Contest closes in which to collect and turn in coupon votes.

HOBBS OF YALE WEDS HEIRESS

Henry Homer Hobbs, the former Andover, Dartmouth and Yale football star, and his bride, formerly Miss Helen Whitney Andrus of Yonkers, are at the Hotel Belleview-by-the-Sea after an elopement in New York.

The bride is a graduate of Lasell Seminary and the daughter of Congressman John Emery Andrus, ex-Mayor of Yonkers and noted as worth many millions. Hobbs met her at Yale two years ago through her brother, "Ham" Andrus, the big Yale guard. Hobbs's home is in Palmer. He is employed in a Springfield department store.

Though Congressman Andrus was still disconsolate to-day over the fact that his daughter had eloped he has decided to make the best of it.

"Forgive them? Well, why not?" he asked when interviewed to-day.

Will Sail to Naples.

"She is my daughter, and he—well, that's enough for this time."

The couple plans to sail for Naples on a honeymoon. The first Mediterranean steamer from Boston now is the White Star liner Romanic, which sails to-morrow.

No member of the bride's family was present at the wedding in St. George's Episcopal Church, Stuyvesant square, New York. The marriage was performed by the Rev. E. Scott at 4 p.m.

John Reed Kilpatrick, a senior at Yale, was best man, and Miss Alice Pase of Nyack was bridesmaid; Emmett Saylor, secretary of the Board of Trade of Springfield, and Mrs. Mary E. Hobbs, the bridegroom's mother, were witnesses.

For two years before he was graduated, Hobbs was one of the star players on the Yale football team. Hamlin Andrus, who played guard on the eleven, was Hobbs's chum in college. However, Hobbs and Andrus were picked for the all-American team of 1909.

A year ago, according to report, Hobbs and his sweetheart had a quarrel. It came following a stormy scene between Congressman Andrus and the young collegian. Hobbs, so it is reported, was ordered to cease his attention to Miss Andrus as well as his visits to the house. The two young persons are said not to have met again till two months ago, and it is declared one of the girl's brothers was so incensed that he would not speak to his sister.

Miss Andrus had the servants secretly pack her trunk last Wednesday night. An expressman took it away without the knowledge of the family. The girl left the house yesterday morning, remarking that she was going to New York. In the afternoon she and Hobbs appeared at the City Hall and took out a license to wed.

About the time the ceremony was being performed someone who said he was "Mr. Andrus" called up the Marriage License Bureau, saying he was a brother of Miss Andrus and asking her if she had obtained a license. The inquirer was told the license had been obtained only an hour or so before.

MRS. BOURNE, WHO LASHED HUSBAND AND RICH WIDOW

MRS HATTIE BOURNE

TELLS COURT OF WHIPPING WIDOW

NEW BEDFORD, June 9.—Charging that he had failed to support her, Mrs. Hattie Bourne appeared to-day in the police court against her husband, George W. Bourne, a young druggist of this place, whom she horsewhipped in his store on North Front street on Tuesday.

The lashing given to the young man by his angry spouse was followed by an attack upon Mrs. Margaret R. Damon, a wealthy widow of fifty, with whom Bourne is engaged in business. The non-support case came up yesterday, but on account of the condition of Mrs. Damon's face from the blows from Mrs. Bourne's whip it was adjourned until to-day.

Bowen was fined $50 on the non-support charge. He appealed.

In addition to the whipping, Mrs. Bourne has brought suit against the widow for $10,000 for alienating her husband's affections.

MRS. WILCOX REFUTES YOGI

NEW YORK, July 9.—Miss Wilcox Wilcox, the poet and authoress, is being congratulated to-day upon a spirited defense of American women's dress and capabilities which she made in reply to an attack from Baba Bsharita, a famous Indian Yogi, who was the guest of honor at a studio tea given by Edmund Russell, the artist, at No. 40 West Thirty-ninth street.

The Yogi, in comparing the women of America with those of India, made such a sweeping statement to say that Americans, especially in New York, gave little thought to anything but gowns, and were hardly ever undressed. His remarks caused a great astonishment among the audience, which was made up largely of elaborately attired women.

Mrs. Wilcox jumped to her feet and went to the rescue without hesitation. "You have no right to attack the dress of American women," she said. "We are not overdressed, especially in comparison with the women of the East. Why, an American woman in her present fashionable costume would feel poverty stricken were she forced to appear at an Indian function where the women wore heavy anklets, heavy bracelets, and rings through their noses and on their toes, as well as in their ears and on their fingers.

"American women are superior in every way. The richly gowned American has at least ninety out one hundred—can neither read nor write, and can hardly suppress a laugh at the children they bring into the world, while every child of an intelligent American woman is an asset to the nation."

WOMAN SHOOTS RICH DOCTOR

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—Dr. Frederick Kohl, physician and capitalist, one of the richest men in the city, was shot and probably fatally wounded by Miss Adele Verge, a French maid, until recently employed by Dr. Kohl's wife.

The shooting occurred in the corridor of the grant building, to which the Superior Court is housed. Dr. Kohl went there as a witness in a suit recently brought by Miss Verge against him and Frank A. Miller, a hotel manager at Riverside, for malicious persecution.

The suit which led to to-day's tragedy was the outgrowth of a quarrel between Miss Verge and a chauffeur and the woman's discharge from Dr. Kohl's service. Miss Verge alleged that Dr. Kohl and Mr. Miller had prevented her from obtaining employment.

The case against Dr. Kohl was dismissed and he went to court as a witness in the case against Mr. Miller.

When court adjourned, Miss Verge descended to the main entrance and when Dr. Kohl emerged from the elevator, she drew a revolver from the folds of her skirt and fired.

The bullet entered just below the heart and surgeons at the Central Emergency Hospital said his condition was critical. Dr. Kohl operated on himself, retaining consciousness and said he forgave the woman for her act.

Dr. Kohl is a member of the New York Yacht Club, the Metropolitan Club of Washington, the Richmond County Town and Country Club of Philadelphia.

MRS. CLEVELAND RETURNS HOME

NEW YORK, June 9.—Mrs. Grover Cleveland returned on the Adriatic with her sons, Richard Folsom Cleveland, who has been grounding himself in French at Lausanne for a year, and Francis Grover Cleveland. Miss Rose Elizabeth Cleveland, educator and writer, sister of the late President, accompanied them.

"I'm glad to be back," said Mrs. Cleveland. "For there is nothing in all the world like this country to come home to there!"

A reporter stepped up to Mrs. Cleveland and introduced himself as one man had presented her with a bouquet of roses in the streets of Omaha while she was riding through the city with her husband.

"Why, of course, I remember," said Mrs. Cleveland, "and are you the quiet man? Then since you were so good as to give me the roses then, you will be carried about your dowery settings now, won't you?"

Both Mrs. Cleveland and Miss Cleveland had been most exact in forsaking their foreign purchases for the customs, and as the result they were kept on the pier more than an hour.

NEW ENGLAND MAIL SERVICE SHAKE-UP

In consequence of the secrecy attending the investigation of the railway mail service now in progress at Boston, a big shake-up in the service all over New England is expected at the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1. The probe has been on for three days, and will result, it is believed, in a reduction of the clerical force in the railway mail service. It is also feared that many of the older men in the service will be forced to retire.

GENERAL WOOD WANTS SHORT ENLISTMENTS

WASHINGTON, June 9.—To popularize the army, to interest a class of persons who heretofore have been attracted only to the commissioned grades, and to extend the benefits of military training, the purpose of General Wood, chief of staff, in pushing to Congress a novel scheme for six-month enlistments. It is the belief that many high school boys and graduates of colleges may be led by the promise of a short taste of military life to enlist for that period, who would not care to abandon the business careers they have mapped out as would be the case in a five-year term.

SAFE ROBBERS TAKE $25,000

PITTSFIELD, June 9.—Burglars robbed the old-fashioned safe in the office of H. Cooley Company's grocery on Main street of several thousand dollars in securities early to-day. They secured $25 in cash.

They also took away $5,000 worth of negotiable bonds, $11,000 worth of stock certificates in the William H. Cooley company and several thousand dollars worth of negotiable notes. The stock certificates in the Cooley company belong to Henry B. Pomeroy, manager, and A. V. Phillips, assistant manager of the corporation.

A list of all the securities will be given out as soon as it is made up so that efforts to negotiate them may be blocked.

The burglars entered through an open rear window. They used a skeleton key on the safe, which is an old-fashioned Yale-and-Barber lock. They took away a brassbound despatch box, contain-ing the money and securities.

The William H. Cooley Company is one of the oldest in the Berkshires. It supplies groceries to Lenox cottagers and does a large business. Theirs handling big amounts of money, and having these thousands of dollars' worth of securities on hand, the concern had not troubled to install the burglar-proof safe.

The store was closed at 6:30 last night by Mr. Dunham, the manager, who locked up the safe in the usual manner.

After midnight a pile of boxes was found by William Marshall, a patrolman on the beat. Marshall investigated. He found that the place had been entered by burglars who had eaten a generous bunch of bananas and thrown the peels in the store. The bananas were in one of the front windows, showing that the burglars were not afraid of possible detection.

Manager Dunham was notified of the break and came to the store. He was at once no outer signs of having been disturbed. But, when the big outer doors were opened, the manager found that the disorder box was missing. There is an inner compartment to the safe, but that was not disturbed.

The police sent word to the surrounding towns to look for any suspicious characters, also to the bankers and brokers of Boston and other cities not to accept any of the stolen securities.

COMPLEXION LOTION MAKES ROSY CHEEKS

In writing for the Los Angeles Star, Mae Martyn, the famous writer on health and beauty topics, says: "Any woman who desires rosy cheeks does the worst thing imaginable by trying to color them with powder or rouge. Everyone realizes that painted look and it is only a question of time when her face will be rough, sallow-looking and beset with large, dirt-collecting pores.

"An inexpensive lotion made by dissolving four ounces of spurmax in one-half pint hot water with two teaspoonfuls glycerine added is far better than powder or any other complexion beautifier. This lotion does not show like powder and gives the skin a clear, clean, wholesome look that lasts much longer than when powder is used. It removes the shiny, oily, sallow look and leaves the skin smooth, rosy and fresh looking."

MRS. F. J. GOULD, WHO MAY RETURN TO FOOTLIGHTS

LONDON, June 9.—Frank Jay Gould's desire to acquire control of the Gaiety Theatre is explained by the statement of some of his friends that Mrs. Gould, formerly Edith Kelly, wishes to star again in musical comedy. Before leaving for Paris Mr. Gould said he desired only to be represented on the board of directors. Certain friendly with Mr. Edwards and have the greatest respect for his genius," he said.

SHOOTS SELF IN WINTER PLACE

A man, well dressed and of prosperous appearance, shot himself in the temple in the basement of the Winter Place Hotel at 10 a. m. to-day. He was taken to the Relief Hospital. He was dead when the ambulance reached the hospital.

Temple Place and Winter street were crowded with women shoppers and there was a constant stream of people walking in Winter Place connecting the two streets when the shot was fired. It caused excitement, especially as the crowd heard that a murder had been committed.

James R. Chase, a porter in the hotel, found the man in the basement lavatory, a revolver in his hand. He notified the police. The man is not known at the hotel. He is described as about thirty-five years old, smooth faced, with brown hair.

STOKES IS TO PRESS CHARGES

NEW YORK, June 9.—W. E. D. Stokes, defendant in the fatal shooting of the Hotel Ansonia, who was shot Wednesday evening by Lillian Graham and Ethel Conrad, was informed by the physicians at the hospital to-day that he does not believe will soon be out again. The millionaire immediately declared that as soon as he was released from the hospital he would press the prosecution of the two girls. Nevertheless it is believed that the matter will be dropped after the ordinary routine of court procedure.

The only element of danger in the condition of the wounded millionaire to-day is the possibility of blood poisoning. The physicians believe they have taken out every-thing, now that the bullets have been extracted he will be able to taste the delights of food in a few days. He will be unable to appear against the girls when they are again arraigned on Monday.

The mystery surrounding the shooting is still as deep as ever. Miss Conrad now declares that Stokes had been pursuing her with unwelcome attentions. The turfman denies this, but has denied every other statement made by the girls.

There are to-day three versions of the case. They are:

1. That of Mr. Stokes—That he was lured to the Varuna apartments by Miss Conrad at the instrumentality of Miss Graham for the purpose of blackmailing him out of $25,000 he denied every other statement made by the girls.

2. That of Miss Graham—That he went to the apartment to force her to surrender the letters which she intended to use as the basis of a breach of promise suit.

The case is still further clouded by the failure of the telephone record of the Varuna to show that any call went out from the house to Mr. Stokes at the Hotel Ansonia, which he says was the case. Stokes charges that Miss Conrad telephoned to him a number of times on this day and that she finally prevailed upon him to come to the apartment upon the plea that she was starting for New Orleans to join her brother and that she was offering him a last chance to get back the letters which had been entrusted to her by Miss Graham, who, he says, Miss Conrad told him was gone to Europe.

GAYLEY STEEL WITNESS TODAY

WASHINGTON, June 9. James Gayley, former vice-president of the United States Steel Corporation and a director of that concern, was the first witness to-day before the Stanley committee investigating the alleged Steel Trust.

Judge Gary had told the committee that Mr. Gayley was a practical steel man. In beginning his testimony Mr. Gayley said he first went with Andrew Carnegie in 1885, as superintendent of the Carnegie Blast Furnaces. In 1892 he became a partner and in 1896 was in charge of the raw material department.

"Was there any growth of the Carnegie company from 1892 to 1901, when it was absorbed?" asked Representative Young.

"The growth of the company was tremendous," replied Mr. Gayley. He then went into details regarding the improvement of the Carnegie company before it was taken over by the United States Steel Corporation.

Representative Young then began to ask a series of questions relating to Steel properties.

"Were there any price agreements?" asked Mr. Young.

"Some years ago," said Mr. Gayley, "there was an era of destructive competition, but it was a question of fight. The Steel companies would fight a while and then a reorganization. They would then go back to fighting again. Agreements were made necessary in these times."

"Did the Carnegie Company absorb any concern during the time of what you call term destructive competition between the independent companies?" asked Mr. Young.

Mr. Gayley did not recall that the Carnegie concern had. He admitted that a few years ago the Pennsylvania Railroad had practically fixed the price of steel rails by distributing orders for rails among the different companies.

MAHONEY DIVORCE CASE IS ON AGAIN

Timothy F. Mahoney, a Charlestown letter carrier, and his wife, Rose, are once more at odds. Their troubles will again be aired in the Suffolk divorce court next week. They were divorced in June, 1908, but became reconciled and lived together before the six months were up to which the decree would become absolute. The divorce decree was set aside by the court on the ground of reconciliation and the couple lived together until last Christmas. Mrs. Mahoney appealed to the Suffolk Probate Court to-day asking for the custody of their six-year-old daughter, Margaret, but Judge George refused to hear the petition, because Mrs. Mahoney's petition to have the decree setting aside her divorced comes up next week in the divorce court. She alleges fraud on her husband's part.

WATCH IS ASKED ON NEW HAVEN ROAD

Joseph J. Feely to-day sent a letter to the Mayor calling attention to alterations of grade on the New Haven Railroad at Harrison square, Field's Corner and Pope's Hill, which he says are being made illegally at the expense of the city. Mr. Feely says these alterations are being made pursuant to a decree of the Superior Court confirming the report of a special commission. In a similar case, Mr. Feely cites, Waltham had a decree pronounced invalid by the Supreme Court on the ground that the commissioners had no jurisdiction to impose any such cost on the city, and he asks the Mayor to take action before the bills for construction are presented.

SENATE PASSES "DIRECT" BILL

The direct nominations bill passed the Senate to engrossment to-day without opposition. Some small amendments, that were actual amendments suggested by the best parliamentarians of the body and not for the purpose of delay or the defeat of the measure, were added.

The means practically that the bill is sure of becoming a law and that next year's elections will be under it. The bill provides the direct nomination of the State ticket, the members of the Legislature, county officers, congressmen and councilors, for the direct election of State and district committeemen and delegates to the State convention.

The State convention under the new law will have nothing to do but draft a platform of the party principles. The bill now goes back to the House for concurrence in the amendments. The Governor favored the measure in his inaugural address.

TINY FIRE FLURRY AT HOTEL BREWSTER

Chris, the barkeep, industriously polishing glasses behind the bar of the Hotel Brewster, looked up in surprise as a bell clang stopped before the door about 7:10 to-day and a fireman burst in.

"What'll yuh have?" Chris had just started to say when a porter grabbed the fireman by the arm. "It's in the basement," whispered the porter. "Put dat axe down it quiet-like. Don't wake the guests."

The firemen quenched around a little fraud flame, put it out, and drove off as quietly as they had come. Chris kept polishing glasses.

BABY ABANDONED IN AUTO BLANKET

STOCKBRIDGE, June 9.—Attracted by the sharp cries which came from the side of the main road between this town and Glendale, Miss Morley, the young daughter of Charles Morley, a farmer of this place, found a baby, which the doctors say is only a few hours old. The infant was wrapped up in an automobile blanket and was placed under some shade trees about twenty yards from the road. The baby was given to the care of the overseers of the poor.

Forty-eight true bills, including three for murder in the second degree, and two no bills were reported by the June Grand Jury of Middlesex County to Judge Hardy in the Superior Court at East Cambridge to-day.

The murder indictments are against Pasquale De Georgis and Nicola Salerino of Watertown, who are charged with having slain a fellow countryman in a fight, and against Charles Rosenfeld, a colored waiter in Memorial Hall, who was captured in a chase in which many Harvard students took part after he had shot Heath Hughes, another waiter at Memorial.

OFFERS TO BUY MASONIC HOME

The Masonic Temple property at the corner of Tremont and Boylston streets may be purchased by the Boston Consolidated Gas Company and the present structure be remodeled or on the site one of the finest office buildings in the city be erected.

The gas people have decided to move from their present quarters on West street. Several sites have been considered and the Masonic Temple is more in favor than any of the others.

Neither the Masonic trustees nor the gas people are inclined to talk of the proposed sale or purchase of the building. It is reported that the gas people have made an offer of $1,250,000 for the structure, and that the trustees have offered to sell for $1,500,000. The negotiations either than this preliminary offer have in fact not been fairly begun. Nothing will finally be done until the return of President J. L. Richards, who is absent on a vacation.

MRS. P. SUTTLES.

ATLANTA, Ga. (Special).—"It is with great pleasure that I acknowledge the merits of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I have taken it at many different times in my life as a tonic and stimulant, and have been greatly benefited by its use each time, regaining my strength in a very short while. I am 41 years of age and the mother of nine fine children. I hope all who wish health and strength will take Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. I know it will do them good." Mrs. P. Suttles, 80 Ira St.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is an absolutely pure, gentle and invigorating stimulant and tonic. When taken at meal times it stimulates the mucous surfaces and little glands of the stomach to a healthy action, thereby improving the digestion and assimilation of the food and giving to the system its full proportion of nourishment. This action upon the digestive process is of great importance, as it brings to all the tissues and organs of the body the nutriment necessary to their sustenance and indirectly to the whole system strength and vigor. It is prescribed by doctors and recognized as a family medicine everywhere.

Thousands of letters of gratitude are received from men and women in all walks of life, both old and young, who have been cured and benefited by the use of this great medicine and who continue to enjoy good health.

THE DUFFY MALT WHISKEY CO., ROCHESTER, N. Y.

GIRL IS SHOT BY A CHINAMAN

BANGOR, Me., June 9.—Tee Sheng Linn, a Chinese student in the University of Maine, is locked up in the county jail here, charged with shooting Miss Christie Shaw, a twenty-three-year-old teacher in the high school of Orono. Miss Shaw was brought here and placed in the Eastern Maine Hospital, where it is said she will recover, although she will probably be disfigured.

The girl, who had tutored Linn in Latin, was returning home from a high school dance, accompanied by her brother. As they were crossing the covered bridge between Orono and Webster village, a young man leaped out of the shadow and fired three shots pointblank at her head. She fell, screaming with pain, and the man took to his heels.

Alarmed by the shots and screams a crowd soon gathered. Miss Shaw's brother declared he thought the girl's assailant was Linn and a posse composed of students and men and women residents of the town organized a man hunt. They came upon Linn leaning against a tree on the bank of the river less than a hundred yards below the bridge.

Chinese Took Poison.

Linn did not resist arrest. He seemed to be in a state of collapse and mumbled that he had taken poison. He was carried to the fire station where restoratives were administered and he revived. He refused to talk, however. A paper which he had clutched in his hand was taken from him and turned over to County Attorney George E. Thompson, who happened to be in Orono, and the prisoner was put aboard a late train and brought to the jail here. Attorney Thompson refused to make public the contents of the paper. He had also in his possession today several letters directed to Miss Shaw which were taken from the Chinese student's pockets. Another letter was addressed to a Bangor newspaper man.

Linn was hurried to Bangor because of the feeling against him in Orono where Miss Shaw was very popular. She is the daughter of Andrew M. Shaw, superintendent of grounds at the University of Maine, and was one of the belles of the town.

Helped Him in His Studies.

Dr. Eugene B. Sanger of Bangor, who was calling at the Webster residence at the time of the shooting, took the girl in charge almost immediately and after a preliminary examination of her wounds, accompanied her to the hospital here. Only one shot, it is said, took effect, but the bullet entered behind the left ear and penetrated to a spot over the right eye. Surgeons will make an effort to remove it today.

Linn was known as a quiet, inoffensive student and he was well liked by the college boys at college. Miss Shaw had tutored him in Latin, and had helped him with other studies. He is a junior in the university, being enrolled in the electrical engineering course.

ADAMS SQUARE

5,000 KILLED IN MEXICAN DISASTER

probably be the only tombs the others will have.

There are not enough left living to remove the dead and bury them. Scores of women and children lie crushed to death beneath the ruins of the churches that collapsed while they were praying. Practically none of the worshipers escaped.

San Sebastian reports seventy dead, all killed by falling walls. Inhabitants of this town of Toxilla were warned by a sudden subterranean roaring and started to flee, but were overtaken by a rushing stream of lava and a shower of hot stones. Scores were crushed by boulders and stones and the rest overwhelmed by lava.

Residents of San Andres, which is close to the Colima crater, braved the storm of sweep of the lava and endured ten days of dark. There they were buried under the lava, sand and hot ashes.

With two volcanoes spurting forth deadly lava and many volcanic sections of Mexico still to be heard from it is feared here that the present conception of the disaster will not begin to approximate its real extent.

Rescue Work Handicapped.

Rescue work has been partly restored. In many of the sections of the country there is no telegraph at all, and residents there are compelled to depend upon messengers to communicate with the outside world.

The only way that many of the stricken districts can be reached is by horse and then by automobile. This city is trying to send help wherever it is believed that it is needed, but fears that it is inadequate to the great task.

It is expected that news from other sections of the State like that which reached Mexico City today from the interior of Yucatan will continue to come in by courier telling of the eruption of Mount Bacalar. The messengers who came from the interior of Yucatan were in such a state of terror themselves that they could give but a faint idea of what happened. They told of whose villages having been destroyed by lava from the mountain and ash and dust were fires sweeping over hundreds and hundreds of acres.

But they could not give anything like a reasonable estimate of the number that had been killed.

Mexico City today is more agitated than it has been since the beginning of the insurrection that resulted in the downfall of Diaz government. While less than 200 people were killed in this city by last Wednesday's earthquake the people are frightened lest another disaster overwhelm them without warning.

Residents Camp in Parks.

Hundreds and even thousands of residents of Mexico City refuse to sleep in their houses and have camped in the parks or deserted the city for the meadows of the country, feeling that even if another disaster reaches them they will be safer there than they would be within crumbling walls.

According to information received from the region of the Colima Volcano, from which red-hot lava is pouring in gigantic streams, seven towns of more than 1,000 persons have been wiped off the earth and thirty-four others reduced to ruins. The number of dead in these places cannot be estimated at this time.

In many of these towns scores of dead lie buried beneath the debris, and the villages have been overwhelmed. The property loss will amount to many millions of dollars. More than 50,000 people are homeless.

The city of Colima is said to be practically in ruins, with hundreds of dead beneath the debris. In the country around Colima lava damage was done to forty-one cities, all with a population of more than 1,500 souls. Seven of these are reported to have been destroyed.

That fully 5,000 lives were lost is the belief of government officials, and everything possible will be done to render aid to the refugees. Special trains to carry troops and as large a supply of food as can be quickly assembled are being prepared. It is believed that the soldiers will have to march overland a great deal of the way with pack trains before they can reach the stricken district, for the earthquake has wrecked the railroads in many places.

Many Buildings Burning.

No confirmation has been received of reports that Tehuantepec and Coatzacoalcos were destroyed, but heavy damage is known to have been done there. Tuxco in Guerrero has been wrecked, and Toxilla, State of Colima, is reported to be burning, many buildings having been fired by the red-hot lava from Mount Colima.

The fires added to the horror of the earthquake and eruption in the State of Colima. The loss of life was especially heavy in Toxilla, San Andrew, Tuxpan and Zapotlan, in the latter place alone 500 perished. The effects of the earthquake seemed to be felt in circles about the volcano, which has opened a new crater on the west side of the mountain.

Through this the lava is pouring in a steady stream. The flames from the volcano are visible for scores of miles at night. The eruption is the most severe since 1869. The flames are accompanied by rumbling sounds like that of distant artillery.

Senor Jose G. Aguilla, director of the National Geological Institute, will go to Colima to study the eruption and effects of the earthquake. He has received dispatches stating that the quake was the most disastrous in the Republic's history. Communications with the States of Vera Cruz and Jaliseo is still interrupted, and little is known of the real situation in Guerrero.

The present estimate of dead may be increased many times when full reports are received. Many of the rebel soldiers under General Miranda come from Guerrero and they have volunteered to go to that State as a relief expedition. The offer has been accepted and General Miranda will command in person. All the relief parties are being made up with physicians and nurses to direct the medical and sanitary work. That an outbreak of pestilence will follow the disaster is feared in every quarter.

Relief Fund is Started.

By nightfall the first trainloads of refugees from the country adjacent to the capital are expected here. A relief fund already been started, the foreign here, especially Americans, are subscribing heavily.

Popocatepetl, the semi-active volcano west of Puebla, is also smoking and giving indications of an eruption. The inhabitants who can are fleeing into the interior for safety.

It was feared today that a new earthquake in the southern part of the republic will rival that which occurred here Wednesday. A terrific earthquake shock was recorded on the seismographs in the observatory here. The record shows a shock lasting five minutes. It is believed to be in the vicinity of Acapulco. All communications with that State have been broken, and it is impossible to get a word here or from the city.

Damage in the Millions.

Professor Miguel Leon, head of the observatory here, declares that the earthquake of Wednesday is the heaviest since 1887. The damage in this vicinity will exceed 7,000,000 pesos. It is impossible to get a closer figure.

The Cathedral at Colima has been completely destroyed, and much of the city, which has a population of 20,000, is now in ruins.

The news has reached here that many homes on the floating island of Lake Ochhilteo sank during the earthquake and it is believed that hundreds of persons were drowned.

Many Churches Destroyed.

In the town of Tuxpan, in the State of Jaliseo, 106 persons were killed, while the list of injured is unknown. The walls of the town are still falling. Three churches were destroyed. Fifty worshippers in the cathedral in Sonsora, Vera Cruz, were crushed to death by falling walls. The tower of the cathedral crashed through the roof ruining the great church and killing the worshippers.

Seven persons were killed and nineteen injured in Tocuba, a suburb of this city. The statue of Guadalajara Hidalgo, the patron saint of Mexico, was carried from the church by the priests at the beginning of the quake. Thousands of worshippers around the statue now declare that this act saved the church.

The town is practically uninjured, though exactly in the midst of the earthquake belt.

Two were killed and seven injured at San Angele.

Descendants of Aztecs.

The Ochhilteo dead are unknown as all were killed by the sinking of houses on the island. These Ochhilteo people are all descendants of the Aztecs and of pure unmixed blood. The islands furnish all the flowers and vegetables for the city of Mexico, and are famous for their floating gardens of Montezuma.

At Atzcapatzalco five are dead.

Seven were killed and more than a score injured at Tlalpan by the falling of the walls of houses.

At Tlnoa five were killed and several injured.

The other suburbs of the city have not been heard from, but the list of dead is steadily creeping upward.

A special train went to San Andres, the largest of the towns destroyed, reports Tuxpan dead with many hundred more buried in the ruins of the houses in which they have fallen.

Mexico City's hospitals, morgues, barracks and police stations are to-day filled with the dead. While under tons of stone, ruin and timber lie others unknown. Hundreds worked all night to rescue these, only to be relieved this morning by others equally willing.

Pitiful scenes are being enacted with the women and the children searching for fathers, husbands and sweethearts. Women were seen in front of the bodies of their loved ones. One woman was rescued as she was about to leap from a fifth story.

Bull fights are being planned to-day to raise funds for the relief of the widows and orphans. The scenes in the street following the earthquake are almost impossible to imagine. Hats, shoes, dogs and cats scurried under foot. Women screamed and several horses went mad and had to be shot.

Guanajuato, capital of the State of Jaliseo, a city of 125,000 population, has nearly two hundred injured, but none dead so far as can be learned here. The cathedral, containing a $2,000 Murillo painting, the Assumption, was cracked in two great fissures six inches wide.

The towns of Toxilitta, San Andres, Toxilla, San Gabriel, Tuxpan and Zapotlan, ranging in size from 500 to 5,000 population, have been destroyed by streams of molten lava flowing down the sides of Mount Colima. The entire State of Colima was shaken by the shock of the eruption. Cracks opened in the mountains and many mines were filled with water. Several hot springs burst forth from the foothills of Colima crater.

With the restoration of telegraphic communication to-day it is learned that the Colima volcano broke forth in violent eruption on Tuesday. Lava was thrown to a great height, and the molten mass, which since the eruption of 1869 has not reached a point farther than 1,000 feet below the crater, is burning its way through the rank tropical vegetation that covers the west side of the mountain.

As seen from the nearest points it seems that a new crater has opened on the west side of the mountain, but owing to the dense smoke rolling up in an almost straight column thousands of feet high and covering the entire front of the lime, it is hard to ascertain the exact conditions.

SEAMEN THREATEN WORLD-WIDE STRIKE

LONDON, June 9.—It was unofficially announced to-day that the International Seamen's Union would call a world-wide strike on June 29, just one week after the coronation of King George and while the bulk of foreign visitors are still on British soil. Reports from Southampton to-day say that shipping troubles are spreading. Coal heavers have struck and sailors and firemen attendants on liners engaged for the New York trip have threatened to quit if nonunion men are employed. Twelve large transatlantic steamers are held up at Southhampton with no coal in their bunkers.

COAT COLLAR WHITE WITH DANDRUFF

Scalp Badly Affected. Itched Terribly. Hair Fell Out. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Now Has Thick Growth of Hair and Is Never Troubled with Any Dandruff or Itching of Scalp.

"I am more than gratified by the successful results I obtained by the use of the Cuticura Remedies. For several years my scalp was very badly affected with dandruff and scales. My scalp itched terribly at times and my hair fell out. My coat collar would be actually white with the dandruff that had fallen from my head. My scalp being like that of a barber. I was particular about having my hair in good condition, and was also in a position to try many lotions, etc., for the scalp. These had little or no effect. I had read so much about the Cuticura Remedies that I resolved to try them. I shampooed my head with Cuticura Soap twice a week and after drying my head thoroughly, I anointed the parts of my scalp with Cuticura Ointment. I was pleased from the outset, and continued to keep up this treatment. To think that only three cakes of Cuticura Soap and one and one-half boxes of Cuticura Ointment rid my head of this annoying trouble, made me feel quite contented. I have now got a thick growth of hair and I am troubled with never any dandruff or itching of the scalp. There is no question but that the Cuticura Remedies cured me. I frequently recommend them to my customers, and they think a great deal of them." (Signed) John F. Williams, 207 Norfolk Street, Dorchester, Boston, Mass., July 28, 1910.

Restores Natural Color to Gray Hair.

Not a Stain or Dye.

That growing old and gray is unwelcome to most of us is shown by the immense unbelievable quantity of hair dyes and stains that are sold each year in the United States. Aside from the danger that attends the use of these preparations it is well known that even the best of them cannot give permanent results and that they color the hair unevenly and in patches, making the user ridiculous to any close observer.

Printed below is the prescription or formula of a preparation that is not a stain or dye, but contains no coloring matter, but which rapidly restores natural color to gray, streaked or faded hair in a manner which is truly remarkable, solely by its action in toning and stimulating the color cells in the hair roots, supplying them with the natural food and all nourishment which they require.

The ingredients are all simple, standard and inexpensive pharmaceutical products which you can get from any druggist or store. The druggist will supply them, or will do it at once if he is not willing to stand one-half hour before using. Here is the prescription:

Bay Rum	6 oz.
Lavona de Comoosee	2 oz.
Menthol Crystals	½ dr.

Apply night and morning, rubbing briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. This preparation is perfectly harmless and is recommended not only for the purpose named, but as a truly wonderful hair grower.

just Say Hires

SIMPLY "Rootbeer" does not mean Hires, as Hires is not simply Rootbeer, but Nature's Food. Fruit and flowers of the field, herbs and roots of the forest have lent their juices to make the best drink on Earth.

HIRES tones the system. It is refreshing, healthful, invigorating.

THE EVOLUTION OF A TEMPERANCE DRINK

How Hires Rootbeer Came to be Discovered.

For ages there has been a desire on the part of millions of people to find a drink at once delightful to the taste and agreeable to the system. In the effort to find this drink, chemists have experimented with essential oils, synthetic flavors, and even sedatives and narcotics.

Many discoveries of fruit drinks have been made. Some of these have been exquisitely pleasing combinations of refreshing drinks, but it was found that the human system would take only a limited amount of the fruit acid, that more than that amount would cause excess of gastric juice.

Hires Rootbeer was worked out as a result of the study of how to make a drink at once healthful and pleasing. It is the one drink that can have only beneficial effects on the system no matter how much of it is taken.

The pleasing flavor is the result of the ingredients that enter into it: Sarsaparilla, Juniper Berries, Hops, Spikenard, Teaberry Leaves, Ginger and Sassafras.

Hundreds of thousands of people have drunk Hires from babyhood to middle age, for Hires has been made for more than a third of a century. It has been perhaps longer and more favorably known by a greater number of physicians than any other beverage.

The tonic flavor of the roots and herbs that enter into it are well known. Hires never disarranges the stomach, but only benefits the blood by pleasing the taste and quenching the thirst. That is the reason why it has come to be regarded as the great American drink.

The Boston-to-Bermuda yacht race, for which the city had donated a $500 prize cup, was to-day called off by the Boston Yacht Club, which was arranging the contest. A race on fishermen may be arranged as a substitute. Commodore Bryan S. Perrar of the Boston Yacht Club notified the mayor's office that the entries for the contest had been withdrawn and that the club had decided to abandon the race. The city had purchased a sterling silver cup of handsome design and the trophy was ready for delivery a week ago.

FOSS WOULD LOP OFF FISH BOARD

Governor Foss to-day sent his fifty-second message to the Legislature and in it he urges the abolition of the Fish and Game Commission as an unnecessary board and suggests that the work of the department of forestry, fisheries and game be placed under a central management of, preferably, one man.

George W. Field of Sharon is chairman of the Fisheries and Game Commission and F. William Rane of Newton is State Forester.

ELIOT IN CLASH WITH DR. CABOT

President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard, and Dr. Richard C. Cabot were the principal speakers in a special class on the subject of the education of the young in sex-hygiene, at the National Conference of Charities and Correction at Ford Hall to-day. Dr. Eliot's stand is summarized in his own words:

"Silence in reference to sex-hygiene can no longer be tolerated. It has failed."

Dr. Cabot declared: "The amount of ignorance of matters of sex-hygiene is much less than is usually supposed. Most people know too much, and don't know it right. What we want is education, not information."

Dr. Eliot said:

"This subject touches every aspect of every human life. It deals with the profoundest emotions of the human being. It touches the whole human system.

"We must deal with it in an educational way. Much time will pass before we can get results. We must start the training in our normal school and agricultural colleges. Here teachers should be trained to teach children about themselves.

Differs With Dr. Eliot.

"We must study the question in reference to the harm that one person may do to another. So I say that this subject is a very broad and comprehensive one. It touches the very noblest and purest sentiments of mankind and also touches the vilest sentiments of human nature. These evils that are existing in society to-day cannot be cured until they are made matters of public discussion."

Dr. Cabot urged education, and discounted mere information.

"The amount of ignorance about sex hygiene is less than believed," he said. "We teach much by advocating the contagion of personality and practice by watching good models. Lectures are not final. Now what do we want to order that the boys and girls may understand themselves?

"We want smaller classes in our public schools, so that there may be the personal touch between teacher and pupil. Then we want the influence of athletic instructors. The right kind of instructor, the man who leads a clean life, will have much influence with boys. Positive ideals of clean living will drive out lower ideals.

"I advocate the Boys Scout movement as a help in solving this problem of telling the boy how to be clean and considerate of himself. This evil is an omnipresent evil. Morality and religion rightly applied will do much in solving it."

New York Teacher Speaks.

Miss Laura B. Garrett of New York told of the practical ways in which she was teaching morality among boys in that city. "I would begin with the little boy at once," she said "and not wait till he goes to college. I feel that this subject should be taught reverently and outdoors in small groups."

Professor A. R. Hatton of Western Reserve University, in speaking on "Drunkenness," thought that prohibition did not prohibit, and of the two systems of limiting the sale of liquor he thought that license should be adopted rather than prohibition.

POLICE LIST SHOWS 99,495 CITY VOTERS

There are 99,459 registered male voters in Boston according to the police listing, the result of which was announced by the election commissioners to-day. This is 10,578 less than the figures for 1910 after the supplementary registration was completed. The decrease is about normal and when those who were missed by the police are later listed the number is expected to reach the figure of last year. There are 9,029 women listed by the police as eligible to vote for school committee. This is a decrease of 1,340 from the final figures of 1910.

BRANDEIS POINTS OUT BENEFIT OF INSURANCE FOR THE WORKINGMAN

Louis D. Brandeis declared that inhuman conditions in social and industrial life must be removed and urged an adequate social insurance system, in his address before the National Conference of Charities and Corrections in Tremont Temple last night.

"Men are not free when fortunately dependent upon the will of other individuals," he said.

"We have to learn that financial dependence among the wage earning class is in a large part to sickness, accident, inability, unremunerative or unemployment, or the premature death of the actual wage earner of the family. Undependence the time, referred to in individual cases as misfortune, are now recognized as constituting the inevitable of the lives of wage earners, and must be met by a comprehensive system of social insurance."

Workingman Free Politically.

"American democracy rests upon the basis of free citizens. Politically an American workingman is free. But he has not made him economic so he really free, nor can he really free who is constantly in danger of becoming dependent upon considerations upon somebody and knowing more than his own exertion and conduct.

"The privilege attending freedom is small indeed, and the use of providing to the workingman as an essential of free institutions, the adoption of adequate systems of insurance will prove to be no expense in this general end.

"Industrial waste is great. It should be lessened and consequently cost. For example, the waste involved in the unemployment of intelligent masses attending accident, sickness, invalidity, old age, premature unemployment and unemployment should be recognized as a part of the daily cost of production. The fact that the workingman has no fund for food and for sickness or for old age is a heavy charge. It should be met now as a current expense instead of being allowed to accumulate as a debt who compound interest against the beneficiary.

"The intelligent property owners omit no hazards against fire. Everybody recognizes the fire insurance premium as a current expense. And yet the chance of loss by fire is very small compared with the chance of loss of earnings by sickness, accident or premature death. The intelligent manufacturer makes it one of the charges against production to insure machinery and plant. And yet the depreciation of man through invalidity and premature death is no less certain and frequently more severe, than the depreciation of machinery.

Path to Bankruptcy.

"Every intelligent manufacturer recognizes rent, interest and taxes as a current daily charge which continues, although his plant is not doing any business at less than the ordinary. The manufacturer makes allowance for this in adding the cost of production as an extra charge to be met from the earnings of active days. But the failure to the employer of carrying an unemployed plant is not as great relatively as the cost to the employee of carrying himself and family unemployed.

"The manufacturer who fails to recognize fire insurance, depreciation, interest and taxes as current charges of the business treads the path to bankruptcy. And the suffering due to failure in meeting the cost of production which fails to recognize and provide against the economic social and political conditions which impose upon the workingman so large a degree of financial dependence.

BASEBALL FOR FUN.

The baseball fans of the Conference of Charities and Corrections will have a series of games on the National League grounds next Tuesday afternoon. The lines which will play are: "The Philadelphia Marconis," Boston Beau Eaters," and "Associated Charity Workers."

KNOWS WHAT CURED HER

This Maine Woman Does Not Hesitate to Recommend the Remedy She Used.

A high endorsement is given Dr. Williams' Pink Pills by Mrs. Albert Bennett, of No. 121 Pahn street, Bangor, Maine, who says:

"For fully eight months I was in a general run-down condition, which I think may have been due in my age. The trouble with my kidneys was caused by the condition of my blood. My appetite was poor and I would feel faint at my stomach. I was so short of breath I couldn't walk much. I lost several pounds in weight and could not go to my meals. It was a burden for me to get around and for many people would have given up and gone to bed. My blood was in a poor condition and a rash broke out all over my body.

"I was treated by two doctors but their help was so slow that I gave up taking their medicine and used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Two boxes I felt better an' as I continued using the pills I improved until I was cured. I look to feet well. I owe the credit for the cure to the pills and nothing else. The credit for the cure. A great many people who know how badly ill I was, have asked me what cured me and I am constantly recommending Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

To avoid ill health and suffering at the critical time, a woman should make every effort to keep her general health in the best possible condition. If you are approaching the fortieth year or already passing through the change and your system is not strong enough to bear the strain, you can get from this certain or quick relief than through a thorough trial of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They quickly build up and purify the blood, which, in turn, tones and strengthens the nerves and every other part of the body until robust health is enjoyed.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are guaranteed to be safe and harmless in the most delicate constitution. They do not act on the bowels but they actually make new blood and strengthen the nerves. If you want good health you must have good blood.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or will be sent, postpaid, on receipt of price, 50 cents per box; six boxes for $2.50, by the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

FOUR YEAR-OLD SIEPS IN TAFT'S SOUP AT LUNCHEON

NEW YORK, June 9.—While President Taft was partaking of the first course at a luncheon in his honor at the Union League club an accident occurred which necessitated bringing him a fresh plate of soup. The four-year-old grandson of William Beard, the host of the club, wanted to give the President a present, and to elevate the child to the reserving level of the guest of honor, someone stood him on the table. A waiter put a plate of hot soup in front of the President, and the youngster set his small feet squarely in the middle of it. The presidential waistcoat was splashed, but vigorous application of a napkin quickly repaired the damage, and the President comforted the child who was overcome by the disaster.

4 PARK BOARD MEN GET OUT

Four members of the Board of Park Commissioners of Lynn received their resignations as Herbert G. Baird, Commissioner of Public Property, today, to take effect at once. This action, following the enforced resignation of Nathan M. Hawkes, chairman of the board, by Baird, who has charge of the Park Commissioners under authority of the new city charter, was taken out of sympathy for Hawkes. Baird alleged that he was incompetent to hold the office. The members of the board who resigned are: E. B. Magrath, the largest taxpayer in the city and owner of the largest dry goods store; Arthur W. Pinkham, president of the National City Bank; Charles J. Hastings, part owner of the Lynn Item Publishing Company, and Augustus A. Hennessey, a shoe manufacturer.

NEW STEAMER LINE COMING TO BOSTON

A splendid new fleet of steamers to ply between Boston and Yarmouth is one of the early additions to come to this port, according to Mayor Fitzgerald. Vice-President Ham of the Canadian Pacific railroad says that his company has already completed plans for this new project.

The Mayor says that Mr. Ham stated that the proposed new fleet would consist of six fine steamers as there are in the world in coasting service.

It is understood that the new fleet will be operated by the Dominion Atlantic Steamship Company.

ACCIDENT PUTS BAN ON COASTER

The Revere Selectmen at a special meeting at 1 o'clock this morning voted to suspend the license of the Derby Racer roller coaster at Revere Beach owing to the probably fatal injury to Oscar F. Young, assistant manager and treasurer of the coasters, who was thrown off one of the cars. Girls on the coaster witnessed the accident and were panic stricken. The accident to the third serious one on the coaster within a month. The license of the coaster is suspended indefinitely. The selectmen will make an investigation as to the safety of the coaster and it will not be operated again until they are convinced that it is safe for public use.

Girls Thrown Into Panic.

On a sharp curve Young, who had taken the place of a guard for the 13th, turned about to caution a young woman behind him. As he did so the train lurched sideways and he was pitched headfirst out of the side of the car and fell under the wheels of the second car, which passed over his legs and abdomen.

The party of girls that was next in turn was carried before became panic-stricken, and all of the women and some of the men were hysterical. Two women were forcibly prevented from leaping from the train. The wild screams of the passengers during the rest of the ride to the terminal were heard for half a mile and caused intense excitement among the throngs on the beach. The unpiloted train was stopped by machinery at the terminal, where most of the women were lifted from the cars fainting.

Right Leg Amputated.

Young was rushed to the Frost Hospital in Chelsea. It was found that both legs were broken and the right leg was so badly crushed that immediate amputation was necessary.

There have been several serious accidents at the Derby Racer. About three weeks ago a fireman of one of the battleships at the navy yard was fatally injured and another man had his arm broken. Later a train of cars failed to operate properly and filled with hysterical passengers ran backwards down a steep incline.

When the accident happened Chairman Asher summoned the other members of the board, when held a special meeting after midnight and voted to suspend the Derby Racer license indefinitely.

Millions of Folks Use Only 'Cascarets'

They never have Headache, Biliousness, Sluggish, Inactive Bowels or a Bad Stomach 4o Make Them Miserable.

A million boxes a month. That's the sale of Cascarets. And every tablet in every box means a day of good cheer. Think what a world of happiness this candy laxative has brought to men and women—also the children. Are you getting your share?

Cascarets cure bowel troubles when they have developed. But, that is the least of their uses. Their best service is to prevent the many ills that come from inactive bowels. Think of the days when you are not at your best. The mornings when you don't feel right, the afternoons when you are logy, the evenings when you are irritable. The cause lies in the bowels.

One Cascaret makes everything different. Don't say "I'll take it tonight." Take it at once. Carry a box in your pocket. The hours before bedtime are too good to be wasted. Cascarets are gentle and pleasant. Their action is as natural as the action of fruit on the bowels. They are sold by all druggists at 10 cents per box.

COLE CHARGED WITH LARCENY

Elmer D. Cole, treasurer of the firm of Clark & Cole, box manufacturers of Middleboro, is arraigned in court to-day charged with the larceny of more than $300 from the Plymouth County Trust Company of Boston.

Cole was arrested in Middleboro yesterday on the complaint of Charles P. Holland, representing the trust company and after a preliminary hearing before Justice Allen was held under $15,000 bonds. The bail was furnished by Ernest L. Cook of Bridgewater and Richard W. Clark of Marion.

The Clark & Cole corporation failed for $300,000, two years ago, and litigation has been pending in the courts ever since. The firm is doing business under a receiver and the alleged larceny is said to have been the outgrowth of the bankruptcy proceedings. Cole is well known in Middleboro and his arrest came as a big surprise to his friends.

GLIDDEN PRIZE SUIT PUT OVER

By J. C. KERRISON.

The suit over the Glidden trophy was called in the Supreme Court in Brooklyn on Wednesday and put over until June 14, when it is hoped that a final decision will be awarded in the case.

This suit was brought by J. A. Smith, representing the Premier Company, and arose over the decision which barred the Premier from winning the Glidden tour of 1910, on the basis of its not being a stock car.

It is possible that the decision in this case will be rendered before the start of the 1911 Glidden, if there is such a thing. A temporary abandonment of the tour this year has not caused as great amount of excitement as was anticipated.

During his visit to Boston, O. C. Hutchinson, salesmanager for the Welch-Detroit, announced that he had concluded arrangements for the handling of his product in New York city by the Rainier Motor Company.

In speaking of the Welch-Detroit, Mr. Hutchinson said: "It is a powerful and quiet car of 40 horse-power, which develops 53 horse-power on the brake test. There is only one chassis, of 122 inches wheel base. The body is either of seven seated foredoor touring car or a four passenger, foredoor pony tonneau, with detachable doors."

Charles P. Henderson of the Henderson Motor Sales Company of Indianapolis, has started a petition to bring to the attention of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission the act of Harry Knight in risking death to avoid striking L. C. Anderson, a mechanician, as he lay on the speedway at Indianapolis, in the course of the 500-mile race.

The Shingle Hill climb at New Haven to-morrow is attracting considerable attention and promises to be a record-breaking event. Several of the cars that competed at the Indianapolis speedway contest are already on the scene and are looking for some close and exciting competition. Quite a delegation of Bostonians will go to the Connecticut city to witness the contest.

HOT FIGHT OVER 50-YEAR LEASE

Definite action will be taken to-day by the joint legislative committee which is considering the extension of the leases of the Boston tunnels of the Elevated road, as well as the acquiring of the West End road by the Elevated corporation.

There is no question in which the improvement associations and the civic organizations have taken more interest and the members of the legislative committee have been besieged with more enquiries as to the probable action of the committee.

The alluring guarantee of marked improvements in transit facilities for some of the suburban districts has served to put many citizens on the line for the fifty-year lease, and on no question in many have the members of the General Court been more thoroughly canvassed than on this question.

A red hot fight on the floor of the House is imminent. Several members of the committee are outspoken in their opposition to the long-term lease and they will carry their objection to the point of filing a minority report should the majority of the committee decide upon the longest period.

Dorchester Wants a Subway.

Dorchester people have been urging a subway to that district. The fifty-year lease provides for this one and with this prospect the citizens are inclined to favor the long-term lease. Heretofore the argument has been raised that it would cost nearly $16,000,000 to build the proposed subway to the district and that such a sum was not available for the purpose.

This objection is wiped away and the subway becomes a reality provided the long-term lease is secured.

For the same reason East Boston citizens who have been agitating for years for free ferries and more recently for the abolishment of the tunnel toll are inclined to favor the long term lease. The tunnel toll is abolished and citizens of East Boston will be afforded the privilege of living in the five-cent zone that other districts now enjoy.

Against the long-term lease is the argument presented by the minority of the executive committee of the United Improvement Association which favors a twenty-five-year lease. That the citizens of Boston should wield a club over the head of the Elevated and not the reverse is their opinion.

An Impartial Board.

They do not believe the arbitration clause in the bill which becomes operative at the end of twenty-five years is sufficiently powerful to secure what might be necessary at the end of the period. The arbitrator clause calls for the Supreme Court to appoint a board of impartial men who will determine after a study what rate the Elevated shall pay for the following twenty-five years. If does not give the arbitrators power to withhold action until improvements in the service are made if necessary or permit them to exact any terms.

For the city to be bound for fifty years is in their opinion unwise. They favor a twenty-five-year lease unconditionally and believe in letting the proposition be re-opened entirely and adjusted at the end of that period. Little weight is placed by them in the argument that with a twenty-five-year lease the Elevated will find it difficult to raise the necessary money to make the improvements in the local transit facilities that are imperative. The subways and concessions granted in the fifty-year lease can be secured by the twenty-five-year lease in their opinion and they point that the Elevated is already committed to the Boston street since it is a substitute for the Riverbank subway to which they are already committed by law.

The members of the Public Franchise League also object strongly to the proposed granting of the sole and exclusive right to use the subways to the company for such a long period. They urge that during that time some other company might find it desirable to come into Boston and would be unable to do so without the consent of the Elevated.

Must be Approved by City.

When the legislative battle is over the question will then have to be passed upon by the City Government of Boston and the scene of battle will shift from Beacon street to School street.

Part 3 of the bill provides for contracts for the use of the various subways and tunnels, so that the Elevated will have the right to the sole and exclusive use of these underground streets for a minimum of about forty-two years and a maximum of fifty years in the future. Not a portion of the act goes into effect unless the Mayor and City Council consent to the provision of part 3.

BILLY PAPKE HEARS SON IS BORN AS HE ENTERS PRIZE RING

PAPKE BEAT SULLIVAN IN WORLD-TITLE FIGHT

LONDON, June 9.—Billy Papke defended successfully the world's middleweight championship in his fight with Jim Sullivan.

It was a fast and furious fight. The Yankee was the fighter, the Englishman the lover. The skill of the latter in avoiding the terrific rushes of the Thunderbolt were exceeded only by the bulldog persistency of the latter.

Both won tumultuous applause and at the end when Papke drove an uppercut to Sullivan's jaw, the spectators gave the American an ovation.

Papke's last words before entering the ring were: "Tell the American people I am confident of winning. I never felt better in my life. I weighed 159 when I started training and to-day I tipped the scales at 158½."

The contest was the middleweight championship of the world, a purse of $10,000 and a side bet. It was pulled off under the management of Hugh D. McIntosh, the Australian promoter, who lured Jeffries, Johnson, one of London's noted music halls, for that purpose and crowded it to the doors.

Throughout the fight was a savage one. Sullivan proved the cleverer at long range work, but Papke excelled at in-fighting. There was much clinching and hitting in the clinches, and the referee, Eugene Corri, was compelled to remain in the ring. He had difficulty at times in separating the men and he warned Papke twice.

The meeting of the American and English champion had been the sole topic of discussion in sporting circles for months past, and large sums were paid for seats near the ringside. Notwithstanding the fight was advertised as "America vs. England," Papke ruled strong favorite to the betting at odds of 2 to 1 and in some cases 2 to 1. Papke had a long list of successes to his record, while Sullivan's best fight was that in which he defeated Tom Thomas and won the middleweight championship of England and the Lonsdale belt.

Sullivan showed nervousness when he climbed into the ring, but after the fight had gone a few rounds he seemed to recover confidence. At no time he was able to stand off the sturdy Papke, who "roughed it" from the beginning, and he dodged with great cleverness several of the American's slashing swings. These, and then landed, would have ended the fight then and there. He used his left and right with good judgment, but with not affecting the stamina of Papke, who was able to take an unlimited amount of punishment.

Toward the close of the ninth round Papke landed a savage uppercut, which sent Sullivan to the floor. He took a count of five and, when the bell rang, staggered blindly to his corner. When the call to the tenth round sounded he was unable to stand up and Corri awarded the fight to Papke amid great applause by the spectators.

PAPKE-SULLIVAN FIGHT BY ROUNDS

ROUND 1.—Sullivan landed two raps on Papke's head. Papke dodged cleverly, but was well on end by various blows. When the call to the tenth round sounded he was unable to stand up and Corri awarded the fight to Papke amid great applause by the spectators.

ROUND 2.—As a result of frequent efforts to get Papke to accept the challenge to enter the ring to separate the contestants, Referee Eugene Corri is hustling. A right uppercut by Papke staggered Sullivan, who came back with a stiff lip.

ROUND 3.—Sullivan's mouth bleeding. Papke makes a wild punch with the right for Sullivan's head, but misses and falls heavily. He regained his feet and clinched. Papke was kissed for holding. A right blow by Sullivan staggered Papke.

ROUND 4.—Both men fencing and two rights by Papke floored Sullivan. Sullivan lands heavily and fights wildly. The audience welcomed Papke for holding.

ROUND 6.—Papke with a fierce spring landed his right on Sullivan's jaw. Sullivan forced Papke to ropes.

ROUND 8.—Sullivan put a hard right to Papke's head and followed it with a quick left. Papke staggered and was bleeding badly at the mouth.

ROUND 9.—Papke lands a hard right on Sullivan's face and rushed Sullivan around the ring, using right with terrible effect. Suddenly, in two step apart and Papke catches Sullivan on the jaw with his right, dropping him to the floor with a thud that could be heard throughout the building.

OFFERS $50,000 FOR BIG JOHNSON BATTLE

SAN FRANCISCO, June 9.—"Tex" Rickard, who was the promoter of the Johnson-Jeffries fight in Reno last July, says in a letter received here to-day that he will offer a purse of $50,000 for Jack Johnson to fight two men the same day for the world's championship at Harmon Ayres.

Rickard, who is in Buenos Ayres, declared his belief that Johnson can defeat any two men in the world, one after another.

"All I ask," he writes, "is that Johnson be given a rest of fifteen minutes after disposing of the first adversary."

PRIZE FIGHTER IS KILLED IN DUEL

Louis Long, the Oakland, Cal., boxer, who met Herrera, Hyland, Neary, Scalzo and many other prominent boxers, was shot and killed near Reno, Nev., the other day, by an angry husband. He was riding with the man's wife in an automobile from Opal City to Redmond, Ore., when the husband caught up with them. Long and the husband engaged in a fist fight and as Long was getting the better of the battle the husband drew a revolver and killed not only Long, but his wife.

HOUSER GOES TO THE ST. LOUIS BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, Mo., June 8.—As the result of the transfer of Danny Hoffman, outfielder of the Browns, to the Indianapolis club of the American Association, it was announced that Roy Houser, first baseman of the Boosters, will join the St. Louis Americans as soon as Manager Hedges can obtain waivers on "Lefty" Georges, pitcher.

WOLFGANG AGAIN PITCHING STAR

By RILEY.

Meldon Wolfgang, the Boston National cast-off and former Albany star, is pitching superb ball for the Lowell team in the New England League this season. In last Saturday's game he put his team in a tie for first place by beating Worcester by the score of 7 to 6.

Wolfgang has won seven out of the nine games that he has pitched so far this season. He is a great favorite with the Spindle City fans and is always called out to pitch the week end games.

Wolfgang first pitched professional ball for Albany in the New York State League, and his pitching attracted the attention of the Boston National scout, who lost no time purchasing him for his team.

He was farmed out early after the training trip to the Lowell Club, where he pitched fairly good ball for the first year, but has shown steady improvement since then, and the chances are that he will be back with some one of the major league clubs next season.

SAILOR WHITE WINS FROM AL BENEDICT

NEW YORK, June 9.—Sailor White stopped Al Benedict in the third round of their 10-round bout at the National Sporting Club. In the third round after both exchanged rights, White slipped to the floor. Benedict unintentionally stove him as he was on his knees. White arose and landed a hard right to his opponent's jaw and sent Benedict down for the count of nine. Benedict arose, but helpless.

MAYOR TO DRIVE SPEEDWAY RACE

There will be a grand opening of the new half-mile speedway in Franklin Field to-morrow afternoon by the Dorchester Driving Club, the big feature being Mayor Fitzgerald driving Ralph Wick, 2:13¼, in a race against Camello, Bonnie Patchen and Baron Patch. Ralph Wick is the property of Freeblood A. M. Johnson of the Dorchester Driving Club, and the heat in which the Mayor drives will be the first over the new course.

At 1:45 there will be a parade of the horses owned by members of the Dorchester Club, headed by a band. Then will follow the matinee racing of fourteen events in which fifty-five horses have been entered. It is found to be a great day for the horsemen residing in that section of Boston, and to further enjoy the occasion the Dorchester Driving Club keeps an open house throughout the evening.

The Old Colony reining Club holds its Saturday matinee at the South Weymouth track with a liberal entry of trotters and pacers. The sport there promises to be very interesting. The entries:

POLO GROUNDS STRIKE OFF.

NEW YORK, June 9.—The strike of the men employed in the construction of the new grandstand at the Polo Grounds, which went into effect to-day, and which it was feared might prolong for some time the completion of the work, lasted only about an hour. Then the 250 strikers returned to work.

TY COBB MOBBED BY ANGRY CROWD

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—Tyrus Cobb had a narrow escape from personal injury at the hands of an incensed mob in the game which Detroit won 8 to 3. A record mid-week crowd of 22,000 witnessed the game and became thoroughly enraged over Cobb's unruly actions toward Baker and Plank and the right field bleachers. Many thousands of the rooters tried to mob Cobb when the game ended. It required an extra force of police and ground attendants, aided by the rest of the Detroit players, to plow a way through the human wall and get Cobb to a waiting taxi-cab. Cobb had a run-in with Plank in the first inning over a ball and the two never lost a chance after that to peck away at each other verbally.

The right field bleachers took up Plank's case and whenever Cobb came in off the field they pelted him with lemons. Cobb usually throwing them back at the stand with as much force as he could use. In the sixth inning Cobb slid into Baker feet first and the latter claimed that Cobb tried to spike him, he throwing Cobb's feet, which were entangled in his glove, aside with too much force, which naturally turned Cobb around.

In the eighth inning, with Cobb on third, Plank tried to catch him napping and on a quick toss to Baker came near doing it. As Baker tagged Cobb the latter tried to tread on Frank's toes. Baker resented this and tried to repeat Cobb's trick. Cobb then bumped Baker and both players were hauling off to punch each other when Umpire Sheridan interfered.

Plank rushed to Baker's aid and he and he forcibly pushed back to the pitcher's box by Davis before peace reigned.

This added to the crowd's excitement and as Ty made the last putout on Collins they made a rush for him. However, quick action by the police and Detroit players saved the "Georgia Peach," from harm.

YALE-PRINCETON GAME.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., June 9.—It was announced to-day that in case of a tie in the games between Yale and Princeton the third game will be played on the Brooklyn League Grounds on June 14.

K. O. BROWN AND CLABBY DRAW

HAMMOND, Ind., June 9.—Jimmy Clabby of Hammond and "Knockout" Brown of Chicago went ten fast rounds to a draw. While Clabby had a shade in cleverness, the Chicago man was strong and forced the fight throughout. Neither was in distress at any stage and both finished strong.

Clabby's cleverness did not show to as great an advantage as was expected. He could not escape the fierce rushes and was forced to fight at close quarters the greater part of the time.

Brown's swings did not connect often, but when they did find a mark it was usually on the glove, neck or back. He used his left to advantage at times and played for the body throughout.

Clabby's best blows were short jabs and uppercuts in getting away from the clinches. These blows did not carry enough steam to be effective, however. The fighters refused to shake hands at the termination of the scrap.

For over thirty years WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigars have been kept up to a very high standard of quality and workmanship.

WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE CIGAR (10c)

The filler comes from one of the most famous districts of Cuba, and we always keep on hand a supply for two years (sometimes for three). Thus a bad crop of Havana leaf is never reflected in WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE. The present season is an off year with all cigar manufacturers who didn't buy their Havana wisely and early — but the WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE is kept up to its traditional quality in every particular.

In size and shape WAITT & BOND BLACKSTONE Cigar (10c) is the same as it was in 1880. It is one of the oldest of the widely sold brands. Thirty-five years of growth indicates a high standard well maintained.

Woman the Protector of Man from the Cradle to the Grave

First It's His Mother, Then His Wife and Finally His Daughter Who Assumes Control

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE.

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

FROM the time a man is born into this world bleeding like a shrimp [illegible] to perpetrate, till the Man on the White Horse calls for him and he climbs up behind and rides away never to return he is under the domestic control of some woman.

It is a woman who gives him life, and a woman who sees beauty and hope and love in this ugly little mite of humanity, and encourages it to live.

It is a woman who prevents him from stuffing himself to death, who warns him of the danger of ponds and streams and pulls him away from the fire. It is a woman who thinks he is worth raising, though every one else on this big earth may have a contrary opinion. . . . It is a woman who devotes her whole life, days in the task.

He passes out from the shadow of his mother's apron strings only to fall under the sweetheart and exchange [illegible] suggestion of espionage for the more grim reality of that of a wife, and in later years, if the Lord sends him a daughter, she assumes control.

Nature's Provision

But from the day he arrives until the day when he departs he demands the domestic control of some woman, and it is Nature's kindest provision in the care of the helpless.

The boy who has a mother in control never goes wrong; the man whose wife holds the reins and guides will never have any bad smashups, and many a man has gone to his grave with a reputation of being sane and sensible simply because his wife outlived him.

Many, many times the world would never have discovered a man was a fool if he had [illegible] a widow.

Many, many times, the world never knows a little reward a woman has [illegible] out of controlling cares down to [illegible] watching a man from the fire [illegible] and binding up his burns when he [illegible] until she is left a widow.

Then she shows an intimate knowledge of his business interests, if [illegible] has been as open to her as [illegible] drawers have been locked [illegible] trained to carry on [illegible] was the difference between home and [illegible]

Are Antediluvians

Such men think a wife's knowledge of finance should begin and end with the grocer and iceman, and act with their wonted [illegible] of money and business plans as a hen acts that is stealing a nest.

They are antediluvians, and an antediluvian's dead wood is one who toils and sweeps, and sews, and doesn't know an abstract from a dog fax.

Away off there in Shade Land there is many a man shade sitting in judgment on his widow because, in her ignorance of the existence of wolves, she became their prey, she doesn't know that he is the one to be judged.

He was the sort of man who believed that a woman should serve man from his cradle to his grave, and knew only as much as his narrow mind thought she should know

He was willing that she should order his meals and lay out his linen; that she should be in domestic control, and know no more about what your uncle said—Senator Sellers told me that I would 'ruin' you. As it has turned out, he was right. I'm sorry I didn't listen to him then." The words I said, as soon as they began to be rent truth, grew so big in my mouth that they choked me, and they came faster than my breath could—I was frightened—frightened—death—I couldn't go on.

My husband said, coldly: "Your meeting of my uncle is particularly interesting just now. I fail to see what anybody on earth has to do with husband and wife with you or me."

"Gracious!" I told myself. "I've begun wrong!"

"Perhaps Pley haven't anything to do with us, but I'm not the kind of a woman for you, and that is clear."

Brushed Hair Hard

He walked over to the bureau and brushed his hair this time—brushed it hard and arranged it very carefully; his hands trembled so that he dropped the brush. I thought I'd pick it up and give it to him; then decided to leave it alone —so it lay there. My husband returned to my side and stared down at me, his face as stern as a judge's; but it was a wonderful thing that in the short time between the bureau and the table his expression had changed completely for ever, as though some heavenly wave had washed it clean.

"I think I'm safe in saying, Esther," my husband said, "that you're the woman of the fewest words in my experience, and to me your silence has been doed gold to the core—it has made a species of atmosphere in which unconsciously I have existed—eaten, slept, dreamed, worked—and I expect you will let me say it—drunk."

Little lips trembled, and the hand that he put up to touch them trembled more. I had no feelings—anyhow, whatever came to me then like sentiment or kindness I crowded back—back, saying, "Remember the horrible, horrible days you've gone through. It will be good to be free." And I watched him calmly and kept saying to myself: "Now, in just a few moments more, I will go out and never see him again." He went on: "Now that you have spoken, however, Esther, it is to the point and tremendous. I'm to understand you've come up here to free me and tell me you are going to leave me?"

And I said, "Yes"

His mouth gave an awful twitch. He walked back to the bureau and took out from the drawer a collar this time and a cravat, but couldn't put them on. Many times I had helped him when he was nervous and trembling, but the time I let him fumble and try; any other man would have cursed. He finally let both the collar and the cravat fall to the floor, came back and sat down by the table and took out a box of cigarettes from his vest—the packet was empty; he let that fall.

I did not say a single word, and was growing disgusted with myself not to be able to do the right thing for the time. I wanted to tell him that I was an utter failure, but hadn't the heart to mention myself. He was trying to sit up and pull himself together, and after a second asked, very politely.

"Is that all you have to say, Esther?"

"Yes, I guess that's all."

And he went on: "I don't blame you in the least—not in the least. You have right, reason and common sense on your side."

I had turned to stone, and he didn't even touch my pity, but only recalled things that hurt and disgusted me—hours of waiting and wretched fear and pain When I got up finally, he asked:

"Are you going now?"

"The night boat leaves at six—I want to catch that."

Reminding where he was in his chair he held out his hand and bade me good-by, not meeting my eyes.

I touched his hand; it was as cold as ice. When I had reached the door I saw that I was really free and that he was going to let me go without an effort to keep me. I took courage. I went down stairs and out of the hotel. As I got my bag in the parcel-room I was glad I hadn't spent a night in Albany, and I tried to realize how glad uncle would be to take him back again, and I thought that he could get a divorce from me for desertion, and marry some clever woman who would succeed where I had failed.

It was a long time before the boat left and I walked slowly down to the pier. Many of the boats had changed for the night, and I was quite alone and calm. I knew I had turned over a great big page in my life. I sat out on the deck and watched the river in the sunset, but I was as nigh unconscious as though I had a fever, and when I went to my cabin and laid down. I couldn't sleep, and toward midnight opened my shutter wide. We were far down the river, and the stars were setting, and it was lovely and still. Try as hard as I could, I couldn't think of my existence without my husband.

Like a Stranger.

I decided to go to Harlem, pack my trunk, and have it carried down to the station for Brackettsville, where the boys were boarding, and go in and out to New York to their work. I had been a member, a seamstress, a tailor—and I had failed As for being a wife—well, he hadn't wanted that!—I hadn't been that, oh no, no, no!

I went upstairs without seeing any one, and sat down in my room. I lighted a cake of smoke, and sitting in the window was my husband! I hadn't crossed the threshold before he jumped up, locked the door, and stood against it. My first thought was, "He is going to kill me—they often do." Then I called myself a fool and looked at him and saw that he had no pistol in his hand. He had on his best clothes, his hair was closely cut, and he had shaved his beard. He was to me a strange stranger, but somehow a new old stranger, and then I said to myself that I was "going crazy!"

"Father, sit down in that chair—sit down, my dear girl."

I did so to save time. He came over, and kneeled down and unbuttoned my boots and took going in and out to keep me. He put my slippers on my feet and I couldn't stop him. He took out my hat pins, and took my hat off gently and laid it on the bed. He was terribly excited, although quiet and wonderfully gentle.

"Listen to me, Esther—listen! Of course, I took the first train, and I ran like a lion to guard his lair! I was sure you'd come home some time or other, and I should have sat in that window, it seems—but I shaved my beard and grew to the door! The reason I let you go last night was because I was coming here to meet you, and I could hear it!" He touched his face where he had shaved his beard

SAD and desolate as it was, and penal as the log to me for forgiveness for the dead, and for the living, I was hard—hard —and my heart was cold and tired; and when I reached the Sheridan House and asked for Mr Kirkland's room and they showed me up to it, I was as indifferent to the fact that I had found my husband as if he had been a total stranger.

There was no answer to my knock, but the door wasn't locked, and I went in. He was in the dressing-room beyond, he had taken a suite of rooms and bath, and he was washing his face, his collar off and a towel in his hand. He stood stock still and stared at me, pale as death, unkempt and rough looking, ill and thin, but he was himself.

"I never was so glad to see anybody in my life!" he cried. "How wonderful of you, my dear girl, to come here like this! No one but you in the world would have control of it."

He came back into the room, with his hand out to me, and smiling just as naturally as if we had parted the day before.

I sat down by a table in the middle of the room, and did not notice his hand. I knew if I didn't speak out fast and well it would be all up with me, that the moment would pass and I would be caught again in a trap of fate as tight as ever before, so I said:

"I didn't have any trouble to find you, for I recollected that you had said something about Mr. Slocum's grave. I guess it drew you here I knew you would come up here some day or other, and I was right."

He frowned—he never liked the I's dotted, and it was the first time in our married life that I had let him see that I really knew everything that went on

His face darkened, and I understood, then, that I had put him in mind of "preaching" at him, "I've been an end long ago of him and of me

"I'm glad you are all right I said, "and that I found you here some like this, for I've quite a good deal to say."

He took his coat, put it on, then dragged it off again and found his vest, and put that on; lifted the hair brush, laid it down, and didn't brush his hair. He came and planted himself in front of me, his hands in his pockets and a funny expression on his face—rather amused and curious. All went very fast, for I didn't mean that he should break in with clever words and phrases, to put me off the track and frighten me by his intellect

WRITE TO HIM

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I kept company with a young man for two years, until January, when he suddenly stopped coming down to see me. I do not know why. I have not heard from or seen him since.

How many I regain his friendship? I do not wish him to think I am running after him.

He lives in another town, very near my home.

He gave me some beautiful Christmas presents. Do you think it advisable for me to return them? We had no quarrel.

P.

PERHAPS, in some way, it is impossible for him to communicate with you. You might write and ask him to call. Tell him you hope you have done nothing to cause a misunderstanding.

If he does not answer your note, you must endeavor to give him up and be interested in him no longer. I would not return the presents he gave you, as they are surely tokens of the friendship which still exists between you.

DON'T BREAK FRIENDSHIP

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am twenty-three years old and I love with a girl nineteen.

I have been accompanying her to rides for the last five months. She and I we loved me and I believed her. I am not in a position to marry now, but I am in hopes of getting a good position soon.

She told me not long ago that she would never marry me because her parents disapprove of me. She said, however, that I might call, but only as a friend.

Do you think I should continue visiting her, or should break off our friendship?

I am ordinary, and I would not like to be considered "fresh."

W. E. J.

YOUR friendship with the young girl need not be broken; and I see no reason for discontinuing your visits to her.

You cannot ask her to marry you until you have a good position and are able to take care of her.

When this is accomplished, and you have shown her parents meanwhile, by your constancy, the sincerity of your purpose, they will realize your worth and reward you with what you fully deserve.

You Can Love Truly and Often If You Have the Chance

By ADA PATTERSON

A FORMER postmaster-general of the United States, former postmaster of New York City and president of a National Bank has lifted up his voice to explode an aged theory. General Thomas L. James, of many years and honors, said on the occasion of his fourth wedding that the theory that we can truly love but one is a lifetime, is "nonsense."

Read the general's argument and consider it before you try to answer it. He says love differs in kind, but not in degree.

"We care for people for what they are, and, as no two people are exactly alike, we do not feel in exactly the same way toward any two people. You cannot really compare affection One might care for half a dozen persons, one as much as the other."

The general, a good American citizen and office holder, did not speak in a Turkish sense, not yet in the spirit of a progressive divorce. He makes no impressionable claim that a man can love two women truly at the same time. He said; "I have never been divorced. My three former wives died."

The general had, then, a clear title for his successive loves. Granted a clear conscience and a happy experience in previous loves, it is natural and to be expected that a man should love and love and love again, and that a woman has the same right and the same inclination.

We know that with the taste for weepy novels, has passed the expectance of continuous seed wearing. The twentieth century is one in which wholesome cure from some has succeeded sentiment A bride gave evidence of this in her farewells to one of her guests, an intimate friend who helped her to slip out of the clinging white satin of her wedding into the gray cloth of her going away gown She had married a widower and she was talking of a future home

"Frank thought I might like to have a new home. He offered to build a house farther up town But I told him the old one was more convenient to his business and he was used to it and I didn't mind. Would you?"

How the bride next at a dinner the pair gave to a few friends when they returned from their honeymoon wanderings. She led us through the old house, when we stopped in the library before the fireplace filled with its summer furniture of fragrant green boughs, and we glanced at the portrait of a sweet womanly face above the mantel. The eye of the bride followed ours. They rested with a glance as kindly interested upon the picture

"My husband's first wife," she said simply

"I am here in the house which my husband occupied with his former wife, but I have never had a moment's unhappiness because of it. He asked me whether I would prefer that her portrait should be parked away and I said "No." I want to look at that portrait til was taken shortly before her death. You can see that it is the picture of a happy woman. If a woman has a happy face, I know she has a good husband. I believe that the man who has been an honoring husband to his three wife will be the same to his second. I am not so ignoble or so silly as to be jealous of a dead woman. My husband never speaks of her, but if he ever does I am sure I shall not mind. She is a beautiful memory, but she is dead I am a presence, and alive

A good, sound, twentieth century philosophy and heroic common sense for all ages.

Copyright, 1911, National News Association.

That cowardly cur, Desperate Desmond, has tied Rosamond to the basket of a balloon which he is casting adrift to float at the will of the currents of the upper air until our fair heroine shall perish miserably far from the reach of any helping hand. This is about the most distardly deed that Desmond has ever done, and that's going some.

As the balloon drifts past the snow-clad summit of the loftiest mountain of Borneo, a St. Bernard dog, which is waiting around for a chance to rescue some stray mountain climber, sees a number of birds perching on the gas bag and makes a jump for them. Yes, we know the St. Bernards usually live in Switzerland. That's where this one came from.

You'd naturally think Desperate Desmond would be satisfied with his work, but not so. He wants Claude to see Rosamond perish before his eyes. To that end he is taking Claude up with him in the aeroplane, and is following the balloon at such a distance that our hero would be unable to save his sweetheart, even if his hands were not tied.

In the meantime this St. Bernard is having troubles of his own. He has been spied by a flock of vultures. They are sore on him because he an often saves the lives of travelers who would otherwise become food for these birds of prey. Now they see a chance to get even, and are attacking the brave dog while he is in no position to defend himself.

Now, vultures, as you know, have very sharp claws, and the minute they alight on the balloon and try to get a foothold they tear holes in the silken bag, which immediately blows up with a loud report and collapses. Deprived of its buoyant support, the basket drops down with lightning speed carrying Rosamond with it.

Fortunately, Rosamond falls into the water and is saved by our pal, Nimrod Jones. But what of Claude Eclaire? The villain has tied him to the front of the aeroplane, which is headed straight for the jagged cliff, while Desmond and Gonsgots make their escape by jumping into the water. If you care to learn our hero's fate, see to-morrow's pictures.

Married Life the Second Year

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

Helen Learns That Warren Has Been Sent For Without Her Knowledge

THE green shaded light on the table by Helen's bed threw a soft glow over the sick room. Helen lay with her eyes fixed on the white muslin curtains which had blown out the open window and were fluttering in the warm night air.

One hand was thrown up over the pillow; the other lay out limp and white on the coverlet. A glass of cracked ice and one of orange juice were on the table beside her.

Her mother came in now with a cup of broth.

"Your father says you must try to take some of this now. You haven't had anything since 3 o'clock."

Helen shook her head. "I can't," faintly.

"You must, dear, you've had nothing but a little orange juice to-day. You must have some nourishment."

Reluctantly Helen took the spoonful her mother pressed upon her, then turned her head away.

"No, no, I can't—I can't take any more," drowsily. "I'll try to a little later."

"Do you feel that you could sleep now?"

Helen nodded.

Her mother lowered the light and went quietly into the next room. But Helen had no thought of sleep. She only wanted to be alone.

She Guesses the Truth

She had overheard something that afternoon which made her believe they had sent for Warren. It had been her father's voice. "If he left last night at 8 he ought to be here to-night on the 10:20. But we'd better not tell her till he comes." That was all she had heard, but it had been enough.

Oh, why had they done this thing? Why had they sent for him against her will? Would he show that he came reluctantly—that he resented the time and the expense of the trip?

With the curious perversity that often comes to one who is really very ill, Helen felt that she was not ill, at least not seriously so—not ill enough to justify sending for Warren.

She moved restlessly to find a cool place on the pillow. Her head was so hot. Oh, why had they sent for him? Why had they? That kept beating in her mind.

They had defeated the purpose of her trip. She had come on this visit hoping that her absence would make Warren miss her—would make him feel the need of her. And she had secretly intended to stay until he should send for her, until he could no longer do without her. And now all this was defeated by her becoming ill and their sending for him.

She heard her father entering the room. She closed her eyes, pretending to be asleep. If she spoke to him at all, she feared it would be to reproach him for telegraphing Warren. And she felt too sick and weak for that.

Dr. Allen was standing beside the bed. In spite of her closed eyes, he knew she was not asleep. Tenderly he smoothed back the hair from her hot forehead.

"Helen, you must take this now," as he raised her head and held the medicine to her lips.

Again she closed her eyes and lay motionless, while he sat silently beside her.

She felt herself growing drowsy. Was it the medicine, she wondered vaguely.

A Troubled Dream

Then she fell into a trouble dose, in which she dreamed that Warren had come and was harshly reproaching her for having sent for him, saying that she was only pretending to be ill to get him here.

He seemed to be standing by the bed, his hat in his hand and his overcoat on his arm, while she was trying to hold him, begging him to stay. He answered coldly that he was going back at once, on the next train. He was moving toward the door, and she seemed to be dragging herself out of bed to follow him—when she awoke!

Would it be like that? Was this dream a premonition of what his coming would be? She was alone, but she could hear her mother moving softly about in the next room. Her lips were parched and dry. She reached over for the glass of cracked ice on the stand beside her, but it was too far away. Her mother, hearing her stir, was instantly by the bed.

Helen motioned for the ice.

"Won't you take a little of the broth now?"

Helen shook her head. Ice was all that she seemed to want. For days she had had an insatiable craving for ice.

"Mother," she asked abruptly, "why did you send for Warren?"

Her mother started. "Why, dear, what makes you think he's been sent for?"

Helen waved her hand in faint protest. "Oh, I know—I overheard you talking about it. You must tell me! When did you send the telegram, and what did you say?" excitedly. "I want the exact words."

"Why, dear, I don't remember," her mother answered, evasively. "Your father did that."

"But you know what he telegraphed! You MUST tell me!"

"Why, he just said you were ill."

"And what did Warren answer? How do you know he is coming?"

"Now, Helen, you mustn't talk about this. It is only exciting you."

"How do you know he is coming" she repeated. "Did he telegraph back?"

"Yes," reluctantly.

"Let me see the telegram!"

"But Helen"——

"Let me see the telegram!"

Feeling that she would only excite her more by refusing, her mother brought Warren's last telegram.

"Leaving to-night at 8."

"Is that all? Did he telegraph this as soon as you sent for him?" knowing instinctively that her mother was keeping something from her. "Didn't he telegraph something before this?"

Helen Learns the Whole Truth

Her mother hesitated. It had always been very difficult for her to tell an untruth, and she could not now.

"Bring me the other telegram—the one he sent before this!" Weak as she was, Helen half rose on her elbow in her insistence.

"Is my coming imperative? Almost impossible to leave now. Wire if condition is critical."

Helen dropped back on the pillow with a moan. "Oh, I thought so—I thought so! So he wouldn't come until you insisted! Oh, why did you send for him? Can't you see he doesn't want to come? He doesn't think I'm very ill. He thinks I am pretending most of it—just to make him come!"

Defeated.

"I'll follow you to the end of the earth," hissed the villain.

"You'll do no such thing," gurgled the heroine—"I'm not going there!"

And so he was foiled again.

"HAPPY man! And was it you who wrote me the anonymous information that he was not Glyn but Osborne?"

"No, that was someone else."

And now Rosalind, blighting her with her smile, which no inward fires could melt, said contemplatively:

"I am afraid you are not speaking the truth. I shall tell Mr. Osborne to get rid of you."

The dart was well planted. The paid secretary's lips twitched and quivered.

"Try it! He'll laugh at you!" she retorted.

"No, I think he will do it—to please me!"

Sad to relate, our gracious Rosalind was deliberately adding oil to the fires of hate and rage that she saw devouring Hyida Proust; and when Hyida again spoke it was from a fiery soul that peered out of a ghost's face.

"Will he—to please you?" she said low, hissingly leaning forward. "He has a record in a diary of the girls he has kissed, and the number of days from the first slight to the first kiss. He only wanted to see in how few days he could secure you."

This vulgarity astonished its hearers. Rosalind shrank a little; her smile became forced and strained; she could only murmur:

"Oh, you needn't be so bourgeoise."

Hyida chuckled again maliciously.

"It's the naked truth."

"Still, I think I shall warn him against you, and have you dismissed"—this with that feminine instinct of the dagger that plunged deepest, the lash that cut most bitterly.

"You try!" hissed Hyida sharply, as it were secretly, with a nod of menace. "I am not anybody! I am not some defenceless housemaid, the only rival you have experienced hitherto, perhaps. I am—at any rate, you try! You dare! Touch me, and I'll wither your arm——"

"Drive on!" cried Rosalind almost in a scream.

"Wait!" shrilled Hyida—"you shall hear me!"

"Columan, please——" wailed Rosalind despairingly.

Rosalind's Note

And now at last the cab was off, Hyida Proust running with it to pant into it some final rancor; and when it left her, she remained there on the pavement a minute, unable to move, trembling from head to foot, watching the vehicle as it sped away from her.

When she re-entered the library the first thing that she saw was Rosalind's crossfolded note to Osborne, and, still burning inwardly, she snatched it up, tore it open, and read:

I will write again. Meantime, high hope! I have discovered that your purloined dagger has been in the possession of the late lady's-maid, Pauline. "A small thing but mine own." I am now taking it to Inspector Furneaux's.

Hyida dashed the paper to the ground, put her foot on it, then catching it up, worried it in her hands to atoms which she threw into a waste-paper basket.

Then she collapsed into a chair at her desk, her arms thrown heedlessly over some documents, and her face buried between them.

"I have gone too far, too far, too far——"

Now that her passion had burnt to ashes this was her thought. A crisis, it was clear, had come, and something had to be done, to be decided, now—that very day.

Rosalind would surely tell Osborne what she, Hyida, had said, how she had acted, and then all would be up with Hyida, no hope left, her whole home in ruins about her, not one stone left standing on another.

Either she must bind Osborne irrevocably to her at once, or her brain must devise some means of keeping Osborne and Rosalind from meeting—or both.

But how achieve the apparently impossible? Osborne, she knew, was at that moment at Rosalind's residence, and if Rosalind was now going home, they would meet! Hyida moved her buried head from side to side, woe-ridden, in the grip of a hundred fangs and agonies.

She had boasted to Rosalind that she was not a whimpering housemaid, but of a better texture, and if that was an actual truth, the present moment must prove it. Yet she sat there with a buried head, weakly weeping.

Suddenly she thought of the words in Rosalind's note to Osborne, which she had thrown into the basket: "I have discovered that your purloined dagger has been in the possession of the late lady's-maid, Pauline. I am now taking it to Inspector Furneaux's . . ."

That, then, was the person who had the dagger which had been so sought and speculated about—Pauline Dessaulx!

Driven to Invent

And at the recollection of the name, Hyida's racked brain, driven to invent, invented like lightning. Up she sprang, caught at her hat, and rushed away, pinning it on to her magnificent red hair in her flight, her eyes staring with haste In the street she leapt into a motor-cab—to Soho.

She was soon there. As if pursued by furies she pelted up two foul staircases, and at a top back room, rapped pressingly, fiercely, with the clenched knuckles of both hands upon the panels.

An a man in his shirt sleeves, his braces dropped, smoking a cigarette, opened the door to her, she almost fell in on him, and the burning words burst from her tongue's tip:

"Antonio!—it's all up with Pauline—the dagger she did it with—has been found—by a woman—the same woman from Tormouth whom you and I tracked to Porchester Gardens—Pauline is in her employ probably—tell Janoc—he has wits—he may do something before it is too late—the woman has the dagger—in a motor-cab—in a long, narrow box—she is this instant taking it to Inspector Furneaux's house—if she lives, Pauline hangs—tell Janoc that, Antonio—don't stare—tell Janoc—it is she or Pauline—let him choose—"

"Grand Dieu!"

"Don't stare—don't stand—I'm gone."

She ran out; and almost as she was down the stair Antonio had thrown on a coat and was flying down behind her.

He ran down three narrow streets to Poland street, darted up a stair, broke into a room; and there on the floor, stretched face downwards, lay the tank length of Janoc's body, a map of Europe spread before him, on which with an ivory pointer he was marking lines from town to town.

He glanced at the intruder with a frowning brow, yet he was up like an acrobat, as the tidings leapt off Antonio's tongue.

"Found!" he whispered hoarsely. "Pauline found!"

"Yes, and the dagger found, too!"

"Found! dearest of my heart! my sweet sister!"

Janoc clasped to his bosom a phantom form, and kissed thrice at the air.

"Yes, and the dagger found that she did it with——"

"The dagger!"

"Yes, and the lady is this minute taking it to Inspector Furneaux——"

"Lady?—Oh, found! found! dear, sweet sister, why didst thou hide thyself from me?"

Janoc spread his arms with a face of rapture. He could only assimilate the one great fact to his joy.

"But Janoc—listen—the lady——"

"Lady?"

"The lady who has the dagger! Listen, my friend—she is on the way to Inspector Furneaux's house—Antonio's dagger—"Mlle diablon!"

"Dance, what is to be done? O, arouse yourself, pour l'amour de Dieu—Pauline will be hanged——"

To Be Continued To-morrow.

How the Storm Breaks

The Approach of a Thunderstorm Is Like the Boiling of a Kettle on a Slow Fire

THE approach of a thunderstorm is something like the boiling of kettle upon a gentle fire. At first there is a long silence, then presently, when the steam begins to generate, a gentle murmuring is heard—the kettle has begun to "sing."

The sound grows louder and louder, until—loud before the boiling point is reached—there is another, though very brief, period of silence, and then the steam begins to bite out at the spout, the lid rattles, and the turmoil of the water is heard within.

So with the growing storm. At first the long silence—long, that is, as it seems to men and beasts, for all of them feel the oppressive heaviness of the air and long for the rending of the clouds which shall set the refreshing torrents free.

The silence is as heavy as the air, and to men at least as hard to bear. Then comes the first sort whisper of the breeze—the first feeling of relief, the first comforting presentiment that the intolerable spell will break. The breeze grows stronger—the kettle has begun to sing its merry tune.

But again silence reigns—the wind has dropped; the heat is as insufferable as before. Men sigh, and say, "The storm has passed; the rain has gone elsewhere."

Yet no! See! Here comes the wind again, and stronger than before.

Over the meadows it races, over the fresh green corn, across the common—rattling the last year's seedpods of gorse and whin, causing the heath to bow its yet unpurpled tresses to the sandy earth.

The trees, laden with their heavy burden of Summer green, begin to sway; the boughs of ancient oak, gnarled yew, and hoary beech creak eerily to and fro.

Stronger and stronger yet, the wind now risen to a tempest—tears along; the first few drops of rain begin to fall—at first sparingly, as that you can hear each one, then in one long-continuous flood.

A blinding flash lights up the land farther than you can see by day; the thunder crashes; the rain blows back from the now steaming earth.

The storm has broken in all its fury; the kettle boils with all its might.

Why Are Women Jealous?

By MLLE. HELENE MIROPOLSKY

France's First Woman Lawyer

WHY are women jealous? Why, because they are! And no other reason you may find is as good as mine.

There are some women who are jealous and others who are not. The women who are jealous pass through terrible moments until the day when their suspicion becomes a certainty. La Rochefoucauld has said something similar, which was not bad for his time. "Jealousy lives on suspicion and doubt, it becomes fury or dies whenever it passes from suspicion to certainty."

But if there are terrible moments for jealous women, there are also pleasant times. She enjoys her uneasiness, for uneasiness is sweet. Goethe says somewhere: "Nothing is harder to endure than a long row of beautiful days." Besides a jealous woman has something to occupy her mind; she has a fixed idea, which to some of them who would otherwise have none (neither hard nor changing) is very pleasant. I have known stupid women who have learned to deduct and reason so well that they might give points to Sherlock Holmes, the greatest and most acute mind of our days.

Women who are not jealous?

Oh, if I were a man, how I would despise them! They must be horrible coquettes.

Women who are not jealous?

There are husbands as ugly and losers so and to look upon that love and confidence necessarily rule. Apropos of this, did you ever notice that love is never so deep nor so strong as between two beings that have been unkindly treated by nature? I have known a one-armed and hump-back who were the most perfectly ideal matched couple.

It is said that a jealous woman is an awkward woman who runs the risk of losing what she wants to possess all alone. I have consulted the statistics and gleaned that among one hundred husbands there are eighty and among the same number of lovers there are seventy-seven to whom the fear of being found out is the beginning of wisdom.

It is also said there is no greater suffering than that of living with a jealous wife. Now, gentlemen, be sincere, please. Tested you are, perhaps, but at the same time you feel flattered, very much flattered indeed.

There is even a kind of jealousy so delicious that I know of no greater damage. It is a discreet, loving uneasiness that never makes itself disagreeable. It has not the courage to reproach; it has not a feeling of possessing any right. But as we then right to call it jealousy. Finally, it is said that jealousy is a sort of egotism. Is this true? To me is jealous woman is a woman of surprising modesty, of a real self-abnegation, of an absolute ignorance of her own. Ill women could see themselves as they may are, that is to say as young, pretty and attractive as their rivals, there would be no more jealous women.

Comptroller of the currency has called for condition of national banks as of June 7.

The governing committee of the Boston Stock Exchange have voted to close the exchange Saturday, June 17.

Spot pig tin in London opened excited and advanced £21 over last night's close to £235, later dropping £19 to £214, but ending the first call at the highest at £235. Futures were up £1 to £191.

The New York trust companies which have been admitted to membership in the Clearing House will begin to clear next week and the statements will be included in the bank statement of June 17.

Stocks were well purchased on the recent decline because weather reports from the West show rain where needed. Not enough rain has fallen in the Winter wheat and corn belts and in the cotton districts. Stock market bears are taking full advantage of this, but the acreage of all leading crops this year is so much increased that, even making liberal allowances for deterioration, the outlook is for greater crops than were harvested a year ago.

The action of National City Bank stock is being watched with more than usual interest just now. Members of the Morgan party are picking up every stock that is thrown overboard by a disgruntled Standard Oil man. What is the Morgan answer to the Standard Oil pessimism.

Steel stocks are also winning the admiration of the professionals by their remarkable strength under pressure. The short interest in Steel has grown rapidly in the last week. Traders who are selling it overlooked the fact that since organization in more than $700,000,000 of earnings have been put into the property, being written off under the head of depreciation. They also overlooked that the Supreme Court in the Oil and Tobacco decisions, and particularly in the latter, laid down the principle that however guilty trust companies may have been, readjustments must be so made as not to injure the innocent stockholder. Therefore even a dissolution suit against the United States Steel Corporation would be no reasonable cause for alarm on the part of investors.

Judge Gary has admitted on the stand that the Carnegie Company would have joined all the other companies if permitted to carry on an aggressive fight for business. If the government compels it to do so, the Carnegie can still take up that fight when it lets off ten cents ago and so can each of the other companies of the Steel trust, each in its own department of the business. The Penn Iron Company that is the coalition would be worth about double what it is worth now. The prospect of a pulling slightly over half the business of the country it would very quickly control all of it.

Defeat of reciprocity would not pull the stock market down. The effect of such legislative action is largely counterbalanced by the fact that the New York Legislature has killed the fire insurance companies have done years more or less willing to increase the price of stock and have been hanging over the market.

If foreign agricultural conditions continue as good as now at present Secretary Ivester's foreign trade this year will be the largest ever recorded. Its sales at present are running at the rate of $4,000,000 a year more than the companies' actual sales last year of slightly more than $34,000,000.

STOCKS GAIN AT OPENING

NEW YORK, June 9.—The stock market opened with signs of improvement to-day only to be confronted with reports of a bear movement in Steel. U. S. Steel opened unchanged, but outside buying caused it to rise to 77⅝.

The excellence of the crop outlook as shown by the government report was responsible for a belief at the opening that moderate advances would be made all along the line during the day. The following gains were registered in the first trading: U. P. ⅛, S. P. ¼, Penna. ⅛, Erie ¼, Erie pf. 102, Reading ¼, and Amal. Copper ⅛.

Canadian Pacific reacted opening with a loss of ¼, B. & O. was off ⅛, and Atchison was unchanged. Although Steel has been under strong pressure, it has been bolstered by powerful supporting interests.

The curb market opened quiet and steady. American Tobacco was up 1 point and Standard Oil was unchanged. There was good support of Tobacco. Americans were an exception to the heavy tone of the trading. This was due in some measure to the failure of the private Birkbeck Investment Syndicate and the uncertainty of the result of the crash. Americans made a rally on the exchange as did Canadian Pacific.

Straws That Show the Blowing of the Wind

When in 1912 the Republicans are beaten horse, foot and guns, they cannot say they went without a warning. Indeed, in that saving matter of warning they will have received more than their due share; since already they have had not one but three.

Tariff—protection—in its scores of blood-sucking expressions has been for years the issue. The people make the issue. The politicians find it in the popular mouth.

What the people think of tariff—protection—was shown in the Lovering Bay State district, and again in the Rochester Boss Aldridge district in New York. Those special elections in which great Republican majorities were up-ended in favor of the Democrats taught a lesson in tariff—protection—which a wayfaring man though a fool might have read as he ran. Nothing short of a numbskull Republicanism could have failed to profit thereby.

There are 16,800,000 breakfast tables spread throughout the land. Some are poor. Some are rich; all are and for months have been council boards at which the wife, the mother as a priestess of reciprocity or free trade, descanted on the black evils of protection.

The shipwreck of Republican hopes in the Lovering and the Rochester-Aldrich districts was not therefore surprising. President Taft beheld the lesson and was wide enough politically between the eyes to be made the wiser by it. He had said that the Payne-Aldrich measure was a "best measure" and found it hard to escape that indorsement. Yielding, however, to the popular will—for in that lay not alone his duty, but party safety—he proposed reciprocity. This was to his glory, It met in many of its loudest demands the popular will half way.

Had every Senate Republican followed a White House example in this it would have brightened the future for the party. But they didn't and they wouldn't. Some of them had presidential booms. All of them had constituencies more or less upon the insurrectionary warpath. Thus it befell that several Senate statesmen, misled by their own personal hopes and fears of White House preferment, and failing to appreciate those motives of rebellion which stirred their constituents, arrayed themselves against reciprocity. They were narrowists who favored legislation for a neighborhood rather than a nation.

Also in their anxieties, selfish, not broad, they went too close to their own interests and to their constituents' interests to focus and grasp the picture of those interests in its entirety. They argued that reciprocity, which let in free this goods or that product, would militate against the pocketbooks of their particular States and were blind to what features of reciprocity would make for the fattening of those pocketbooks.

Wherefore—as stated—these half-blind, short-sighted Senators opposed reciprocity and either sought to kill it by a direct "No!"—like a blow on the head with a butcher's maul—or hamstring it with specious amendments. In all of which they erred, and that whether one considers this business with reference to their own political advancement or the larger betterment of their people's condition. They should have remembered with Hayes that who serves his country best serves best his party.

Their people were wiser and had superior memories. In illustration of which consider the returns just in from Iowa, the State of Senator Cummins. There was a special election in the Council Bluffs district upon the 5th of this month. Special elections, more than general elections, mark a popular drift.

At the last Congressional election Representative Smith was sent to a seat in the House from the Council Bluffs district by a Republican plurality of 5,554 votes. That was before the Payne-Aldrich tariff; before the Taft-proposed relief of reciprocity.

Then Representative Smith was lifted to the woolsack and his House seat became vacant. The special election of the 5th was to name his successor.

In this special election fight of the other day reciprocity was the one issue—reciprocity, which the Iowa farmer was supposed to loathe and hate. The Republicans named Judge Green as their anti-reciprocity candidate. The Democrats, favoring reciprocity, put up W. S. Cleveland. Thus were the battle lines arranged in an Iowa farm district—Iowa, hopelessly Republican and said and supposed to be even more hopelessly anti-reciprocity.

The answer given at the polls must have been gladdening to the soul of President Taft. It demonstrated his political sagacity at the expense of eminent Iowans. It proved that, as a merest matter of personal politics, it is wiser, shrewder, to run the party for the good of the country rather than run the country for the good of the party. Also it made clear, in the teeth of denial, that the voter can see further than the tip of his nose.

Judge Green, the Republican anti-reciprocity candidate, with a plurality wall of 5,554 votes behind him, barely scraped through by the paint on his planks. In an Iowa farm region, where reciprocity is supposed to be hated, in a Republican district so hopelessly Republican that to be a Democrat is to be in the common mind a sinner, the Democrats, crying "Reciprocity," came within a handful of hundreds of victory.

There is a warning in the Council Bluffs returns, greater and more emphatic if anything than those warnings furnished by the Lovering and the Rochester-Aldrich districts. Every Republican in Congress, every Republican anywhere between Eastport and San Diego, Vancouver and the Florida Keys, should take that warning home. The New York and the Massachusetts warnings told what the people thought of protection in States held to be the hotbeds of protection. The Iowa-Council Bluffs warning tells, however, what the people think of reciprocity—a later question—in a State given over by the politicians as bitterly inimical to reciprocity. It indicates that President Taft, not the anti-reciprocity Senators of his party, is leading the rank and file of Republicanism.

The Elevated Has Renewed Its Fight for Long Term Subway Leases—The Elevated Must Not Prevail

It is an interesting coincidence that Judge Schofield happens to be promoted from our Superior Bench to the Federal Circuit Court at the same time that the Boston Elevated Railroad has chosen to renew its struggle for long termed control of our great underground highways.

Judge Schofield was appointed to the Superior Bench from the Massachusetts House of Representatives by Governor Crane as a reward for his gallant FIGHT while chairman of the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, against the efforts of the Boston Elevated Railorad TO OWN the Washington street tunnel.

It was a pitched battle into which the Boston Elevated Railroad threw its utmost strength. Both the Elevated and those who were protecting the public interest appreciated that it was a critical struggle. It meant not only the determination of the control of an important underground thoroughfare, but, more important still, it meant the determining of a FIXED PUBLIC POLICY with respect to the control of all these subways by private capital.

The principles of the Democratic party and its platforms were clearly opposed to the demand of the Elevated. But, in marked contrast with the loyalty of the Democrats in the present Legislature to their principles and platform pledges, the Democrats of Boston in that memorable contest BETRAYED THEIR PARTY and their city by joining with the Republican majority to pass the bill giving to the Elevated the control it demanded of the subway.

Mr. Schofield, as chairman of the Committee on Metropolitan Affairs, led the fight against surrendering to the Elevated such a control of the subway as would embarrass future generations in dealing with the changing phases of the transportation problem.

The recollection of Mr. Schofield's part in that debate is still vivid. He faced the House, and with an awkward swaying of his body, which detracted at first from the effectiveness of his argument, he began a speech which lasted more than an hour.

It was a good speech on the RIGHT SIDE of an important question. But the Legislature that day was not listening to arguments addressed to their reason and their conscience. The whispered promises of the lobbyist outweighed the wisdom and eloquence of Schofield and Saunders. The Elevated triumphed and the bill went to Governor Crane.

The Governor vetoed it in a message which aroused the enthusiastic applause of the whole Commonwealth.

Checked but not despairing, the Elevated gathered its forces for a mighty effort to pass the bill over the Governor's veto. But the PUBLIC HAD BEEN AROUSED and the sentiment was so overwhelming against the bill that its friends in the Legislature deserted the Elevated in every direction. The Governor's veto was sustained.

By this act Governor Crane won a popularity that has shielded him from much public criticism for conduct in the United States Senate which has brought down upon the head of Senator Lodge severe condemnation.

Approval of Mr. Schofield's service in this contest was expressed by Governor Crane in his appointment of Mr. Schofield to the Superior Bench. His promotion to the United States Circuit Court is evidence of his continued favor with Senator Crane.

The issue of this contest fixed the policy of Massachusetts with respect to the control to our subways. It was then determined to be against public policy to give any corporation a lease of these great underground highways for more than a generation. It was a wise decision and it was a FINAL DECISION.

It is hard to understand what freak of judgment has suggested to the managers of the Boston Elevated Railroad that this is a favorable year for attempting the reversal of that decision against long-term leases.

There is a man in the office of Governor who was elected on a most progressive platform and who is keeping the letter and the spirit of his pledges.

There is a man in the Speaker's chair who is often wrong, but never controlled by the usual methods which are necessary to win votes for a bill that gives the Boston Elevated practically a fifty-year lease of all the present subways and of three proposed new subways.

There is a strong Democratic minority in both Senate and House That minority is standing strongly by the party principles.

It would be STUPID to expect to-day any such BETRAYAL by Democrats as occurred when Schofield led the fight for the public interests. Even the Republicans in the Legislature to-day are more independent than ten years ago.

The bill just drafted for the committee provides for a twenty-five-year lease with the right to an extension for twenty-five years more at the option of the Elevated, if the extension is approved by three arbitrators appointed by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Owing to the provision providing for a sinking fund, however, the lease is practically indeterminate with a minimum of forty-two years.

The policy of the State has fixed upon twenty-five years as the maximum term for our subway leases. This bill is a HARMFUL DEPARTURE from that policy for two reasons. It refuses to recognize twenty-five years as a maximum term and it puts in the hands of three men the determination of a question which it is totally improper to determine by arbitrators.

The length of the period during which the public should surrender its control of some of its most important highways, is a question of public policy and should be only settled by the body which determines questions of public policy—the Legislature or the people themselves.

Twenty-five years is a LONG TIME in the march of human progress. Twenty-five years ago we were travelling in the horse cars. To-day electric engines are pulling our great passenger trains into New York; to-day we are making the thin air transport our messages and even our persons.

Who knows how soon invention may enable us to tunnel the earth so cheaply and navigate the air so safely that all surface travelling, except for pleasure, may be abandoned?

Who knows what the public sentiment may be in twenty-five years?

Who knows what the public necessity may be then?

Who knows what the conduct of the Boston Elevated may be in twenty-five years?

Is it not obviously proper for us to let the next generation take care of its OWN PROBLEMS in its OWN WAY? Shall we embarrass those who shall follow us, by prescribing, in our ignorance of future conditions, by what method they may determine their own questions on public policy?

These are days when the people appreciate more keenly than ever before the necessity of securing and holding firmly an effective control of the public service corporations. The short-term lease is one means of control.

It is a fatuous railroad management which believes that a bill carrying more than a twenty-five-year lease of the subways can run the gauntlet of the progressive Legislature and of a Governor who has caught the SPIRIT of the times.
